5 Hong Kong Policemen Are Killed

HONG KONG (AP) — Six hundred heavily armed Gurkha troops Sunday patrolled the Hang Kong half of Shu Tau Kok village, where 1,000 Communist Chinese crossed the border and attacked a Hong Kong police station Saturday with rifles and machine guns.

Five police were killed and 13 wounded before the Gurkhas rescued 86 police who had barricaded themselves in the police post and 80 others in a government building 50 yards behind it.

Govesnment officials in this British colony and in London said they believed the attack was "an isolated incident" and did not presage a Communist Chinese military offensive against Hong Kong. The colony is recovering from Communist rioting and anti-British demonstrations in May and Communist-instigated labor strife in June.

Supt. D. G. McNeill, commander of the police station, said no army or militia uniforms were worn by the Chinese who swarmed across the border, rushed the post 100 yards inside Hong Kong territory, and opened fire.

He would not speculate on whether troops or militia might have been operating in civilian clothes. Many observers in Hong Kong believed that some troops or militia were involved. Reports out of Red China say no one except soldiers and militia is allowed weapons.

Britain's envoy in Peking was instructed to ask the Red Chinese Foreign Ministry to clarify circumstances of the attack. Officials in London said this was not a protest but an attempt to clear up a confused situation.

Hong Kong officials viewed the incident as another attempt to frighten Hong Kong's four million Chinese, most of whom have remained loyal to the colonial government despite Communist charges of racial suppression and atrocities.

Sha Tau Kok is 20 miles north of the colony's twin cities, Hong Kong and Kowloon. The border with Red China runs along the main street of the village, the scene of repeated incidents in the last 12 years.

The main island of Hong Kong was not affected by Saturday's violence.

McNeill said 1,000 Chinese had crossed the main street, surrounded the police post and tried to blast open gates and doors with dynamite.

Driven off by volleys of tear gas, the Chinese opened up with rifles and light machine guns, some of which had been set up in advance on the Communist side of the street.

Four police were killed and a fifth fatally wounded within the first few minutes, McNeill reported.

The spokesman said the Gurkhas, tough fighters recruited by the British in Nepal, were under constant sniper fire but did not fire back when they rescued the barricaded police and restored order.

During the attack one Communist mob of about 3,000 and another of about 2,000 persons were reported moving toward Hong Kong at two other points. The crowds dispersed before reaching the border.

Schedule For Oiling Of County Roads

The Pettis County Highway Department plans to be oiling the following routes during the week of July 10-14: Route F from US Highway 65 south 1.8 miles; Route U, which runs from the Benton County line north 6.5 miles.

60 Persons Are Killed

Congolese Troops Return To Bukavu For Revenge

KAMEMBE, Rwanda (AP) — Congolese government troops, routed by rebels aided by white mercenaries, returned to the border city of Bukavu Friday and killed more than 60 persons, including five Europeans, in a wild rampage of revenge, diplomatic and Red Cross officials reported Saturday.

They said discipline Congolese paratroopers brought calm to the eastern Congo resort city after their arrival by air from Kinshasa, the Congolese capital.

The reports of the refugees from Bukavu to this neighboring nation came as the Congolese radio announced that forces loyal to President Joseph D. Mobutu had defeated mercenaries and rebels in Bukavu, Kisangani — formerly Stanleyville — and Kindu. The radio said the fighting was over.

It said the fighting that started last Wednesday had ended with government forces in control. Mobutu claimed the rebels launched the hostilities as part of an attempted coup ploted in Spain by Former Premier Moise Tshombe, who is now in custody in Algeria.

His chartered plane was hijacked while flying over Spain's Balearic Islands and diverted to Algiers. The Congo seeks his extradition to execute him as a traitor and subversive.

Mobutu canceled a nationwide radio address on the end to the fighting Saturday "pending more information on the role played by some Congolese in the rebellion," a Congolese radio broadcast said.

But the Congolese Interior Ministry issued an appeal for calm and respect for others' lives and properties, the broadcast said.

The refugees reaching Kamembe, two miles across the border from Bukavu, said the Bukavu area is now in the hands of loyal forces.

The Congo-Rwanda border, however, remained closed to all Europeans.

About 1,500 Europeans live in Bukavu. U.S. officials in Rwanda said they knew of no deaths or injuries to any Americans there. About 50 American missionaries in the Bukavu area fled to Rwanda at the start of the hostilities.

The diplomatic and Red Cross officials at the border said the murder rampage of the Congolese troops lasted most of Friday.

They were said to be seeking revenge for the easy capture of Bukavu by Katanga mutineers. Katanga is the province Tshombe led into secession after Belgium granted The Congo independence in 1960.

Economic Reforms Help

German Problems Are Being Solved

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Kurt George Kiesinger seems to have successfully overcome Cabinet disagreements on how best to solve financial and economic problems that have plagued West Germany since mid-1966.

After three days of grinding, day-long sessions, Kiesinger's "grand coalition" government of Christian Democrats and Social Democrats agreed Friday on measures designed to balance the budgets for the next four years and to lift the country's economy out of its doldrums.

The measures include cuts in the defense budgets for the next four years, a slight income tax raise for wage earners with comparatively high incomes and some trimming in the agriculture, transport and development aid ministries' budgets.

Kiesinger placed such importance on getting the problems solved that he canceled his talks with President Johnson in Washington this weekend. He wanted to insure that the various interest groups that support his broadly based government would not whittle away at the proposals.

"I postponed my trip to Washington because I could see that difficulties could develop," he said in announcing the measures. He added that President Johnson showed full understanding. Kiesinger is expected now to go to Washington in the fall.

There was general agreement in the Cabinet that taxes must go up and government spending must be cut. But the ministers did not see eye to eye on where the cuts were to be made and what taxes had to be hiked to raise about 34.5 billion marks — $8.85 billion — needed to balance the budgets for 1968, 1969, 1970 and 1971.

The Social Democrats, led by Foreign Minister Willy Brandt, were pressing to keep most of the social security and pension payments intact. They succeeded, except for some small compromises.

The Christian Democrats were out to protect the small-business men and industrialists who are the backbone of their party. They, too, were comparatively successful.

The new measures include a 3 per cent income tax increase for those earning more than $4,000 a year, an above average income in West Germany. There is also a new business turnover tax of 10.5 per cent beginning next year and a rise in corporation taxes.

The differences in the Cabinet were not along party lines. Finance Minister Franz Josef Strauss, leader of the Christian Democrats' Bavarian wing, and Economics Minister Karl Schiller, a Social Democrat, found wide areas of agreement.

On the other hand, Defense Minister Gerhard Schroeder and Labor Minister Hans Katzer were reported at one point ready to resign if their budgets were cut too heavily. Katzer kept most of his and Schroeder's was cut by $500 million to $4.55 billion in 1968. The total budget for the year is $20 billion.

The cuts will cause the 461,000-man army to be cut by about 40,000 to 60,000 men, according to reliable estimates. But Schroeder seems to have agreed, or to have been persuaded to agree.

Kiesinger said agreement on the measures would not have been possible without the support of both parties in his government. They are West Germany's largest. Even before the agreement, leaders of both parties stressed the major nature of the financial crisis, but had been carefully pointing out that success depended on cooperation.

Substance Is Found

DEWITT, Mo. (AP) — Blobs of jelly-like substance found in a farm pond near DeWitt, Mo., have aroused the curiosity of residents of the area.

The blobs were discovered two weeks ago when Perry P. Stark of DeWitt dragged one out while casting in the pond.

Perry's mother, Mrs. Robert Stark, said the blob was turned over to biologists of the fishery conservation department at the University of Missouri.

Mrs. Stark said the biologists labeled the substance pectueatella. This is a clustering together of small amoebae to form the jelly-like substance.

Mrs. Stark said state biologists would come to the pond next week to further investigate.

Egyptians And Israelis Jets Battle Over Canal

Both Nations Call For UN Emergency Meeting

(By The Associated Press)

Egyptians and Israelis fought jet battles and artillery duels along the Suez Canal Saturday in the most serious breach of their cease-fire since the end of the Middle East war June 10.

Both sides called for an urgent meeting of the U. N. Security Council in New York which was summoned into emergency session at 6 p.m. Saturday to consider the charges.

Egypt said 6 Israeli planes bombed the twin cities of Port Said and Port Euad at the Mediterranean entrance to the canal, killing one civilian and wounding seven other. It said Egyptian jet fighters engaged the Israelis in dogfights. Israel claimed one Egyptian MIG21 was shot down south of Port Said.

The Israelis charged the Egyptians had set off th fighting with artillery attacks on Israeli troops on the east bank of the canal. It said 2 Israelis were killed and 20 wounded.

The first fighting broke out at 9:25 a.m. Both sides reported all hostilities had ended before nightfall.

Radio Cairo broadcasts said Egyptian forces destroyed 3 tanks and 11 armored cars.

The Egyptians charged the Israelis had tried to make an armored drive from the south to seize important canal installations at Port Fuad.

The air combat over the entrance of the canal is the first aerial engagement between the Egyptian and Israeli air forces in the Middle East conflict. In the six-day war of early June, Egyptian planes never got off the ground.

Israel reported its jet fighters also had strafed Egyptian artillery positions on the west bank of the Suez.

An Israeli army spokesman said the Soviet-built MIG21 of the Egyptian air force was shot down in a dogfight between four MIG21s and two Israeli Mirage jet fighters. The MIG21 is the Soviet Union's most advanced fighter. The Mirage is a French-built jet.

The Israeli announcement said the Egyptian MIGs penetrated 15 miles inside Israeli-occupied Sinai and were intercepted by the Mirages. The three other MIGs fled, the announcement said.

There was no mention of Israel air strikes on Port Said and Port Fuad in the Israeli announcements.

The Egyptians claimed they had opened up artillery attacks on Israeli armored columns moving northward along the canal toward Port Euad. A Cairo broadcast said one tank and three armored cars had been destroyed.

Cash Prizes To Be Given At Mo. Fair

SEDALIA, Mo. — Cash prizes of over $2,500 and judging in about a dozen categories in agricultural fields will be one feature of the 1967 Missouri State Fair, August 19-27.

At 8 a.m., Monday, August 21, livestock judging will begin at the Swine Pavillion, under the auspices of G. B. Thompson, Columbia, superintendent; Kendall Anderson, Clinton, judge, and Eldon Cole, Marshall, jjudge.

"We expect to have exhibitors from all over the state," Thompson said.

The categories for livestock judging will be beef cattle, swine, sheep, dairy cattle; with prizes ranging from $10 for first place in each class to $2 for seventh place.

Farm crops and seed will comprise section A of the agricultural judging this year, offering over $1,700 in cash prizes, while hams and bacons will comprise section B, with over $750 in prizes.

Lloyd E. Cavanagh, Columbia, and William J. Murphey, Columbia, will judge the farm and seed crop exhibits.

Farm and seed crops fall into 11 classes: hybrid seed corn, feeding corn, popcorn, sorghum, feeding sorghum, small grains, soybeans, small seeded legumes, grasses, cottonseed, and tobacco and soybean plants.

This year, a special feature of the hams and bacons judging will be the Old Missouri Country Cured Ham Show, the winner of which will take home the Gov. Warren E. Hearnes Trophy.

The Grand Champion Ham will be awarded $75 in cash, and will be auctioned to the highest bidder. The Reserve Champion Ham will be awarded $50, in addition to the regular prize money.

Prizes for bacon strips will range from $15 for first place to $4 for tenth. This year's superintendent is Hugo Dawson, Jefferson City.

The closing date for ham and bacon entries is July 31, and more information may be obtained from the Missouri State Fair, Box 111, Sedalia, Mo.

May Continue For Years

Ho Chi Minh Will Test US Patience

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnam's President Ho Chi Minh has forced the United States into a showdown test of will that U.S. intelligence estimates once rated as impossible.

In 1965, when it was decided to send about 120,000 American troops to rescue South Vietnam from the prospect of defeat, senior U.S. military officers said it was preposterous to think North Vietnam could resist, let alone turn back, a predicted allied victory tide.

But by mid-1967 Hanoi's determination to counter the allied offensive, regardless of the cost in blood and national resources, has forced Washington to a crossroad in the seven-years-long war.

American and Vietnamese military sources say that, unless 100,000 to 140,000 more U.S. troops are sent, the allies may be forced gradually into a defensive posture that could end in stalemate.

This could mean the loss of any hope for a negotiated peace favorable to the allied side.

Even if Washington agrees to all of the recommendations by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. commander, more troops might be needed later.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, who is on his ninth inspection tour of Vietnam, will recommend to President Johnson how many more troops than the presently authorized 475,000 should be sent. The impression in Saigon is that at least 30,000 to 40,000 more will be authorized. There are 466,000 here now.

But McNamara and the administration must weigh considerations the military men don't have to contend with.

To send 100,000 more men probably would mean three divisions together with helicopter, supply and other support units.

Military men here believe this would involve a partial mobilization of reserves, higher draft quotas, higher battle casualties, an additional $10 billion or more in defense spending, the possibility of a tax increase and dislocations in the civilian economy.

Concern is voiced also about the effect of another major buildup on South Vietnam. Saigon sources cite the already overheated economy, government troops who seem to fight a little less with the arrival of each new U.S. division and possible effects on the campaign for winning the allegiance of the peasants.

The Americans, hailed in 1965 as the saviors of Vietnam, have lost luster from their public image for a number of reasons. One is the terrific amount of bombing and artillery used in the countryside.

Impressive Victories By US Army

SAIGON (AP) — Impressive victories over Communist troops in South Vietnam's hard-pressed 1st Corps area were claimed by the U.S. Command Saturday after a week of heavy action in which 134 American Marines were killed, 631 wounded and 5 missing.

The victory claims coincided with Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara's ninth visit to Vietnam, during which Gen. William C. Westmoreland is urging a substantial addition to his U.S. armed forces beyond the presently authorized strength of 475,000 men.

In the second B52 tragedy of the weekend, a U.S. Stratofortress crashed and burned at Da Nang Air Base Saturday night while attempting an emergency landing, killing five of the six-man crew. No bombs were aboard the B52 that was returning from a bombing mission and tried to land with electrical trouble and two of its eight engines out. The surviving tail gunner was pulled from the burning wreckage.

Two of the giant bombers collided Friday as they were approaching Vietnam for a bombing run. Seven crewmen parachuted into the sea and six others were missing.

Headquarters spokesmen said the series of ground clashes and duels with artillery, rockets and mortars that broke out below the demilitarized zone last Sunday had left 836 enemy soldiers dead. That would be six times the death toll of the Marines.

Most of the casualties among the enemy, largely North Vietnamese regulars, were attributed to air strikes and artillery barrages. The spokesman said 505 were killed Thursday and Friday.

The total of 836 dead was drawn up from reports of ground patrols and aerial observers.

Correspondents with Marines in the area said they had not been able to observe personally the big enemy kilis. Some Marines expressed the belief the reports were based largely on estimates from the air and that there might have been some duplication in the counting.

The main emphasis in ground fighting again centered in the northernmost sector. Men of the 3rd Marine Regiment were reported in contact with North Vietnamese forces Saturday night about two miles southwest of the Leatherneck base at Con thien.

Field dispatches said the Marines, planes and artillery had killed 84 of the enemy during the day in a fight in which 3 Marines were killed and 41 wounded.

Artillery duels persisted, and enemy gunners twice lobbed a few shells into the Marine base at Dong Ha, 10 miles south of the DMZ. Thirteen helicopters were reported hit, though it was not immediately determined how seriously they were damaged.

AP Correspondent John Lengel, who was on the scene, said the Dong Ha air strip was knocked out for a while for planes that ferried ammunition to Marine lines and helicopters took over the job.

The continuing Communist threat was emphasized by the North Vietnamese introduction of a Russian-built 152mm gun that fires a six-inch, 90-pound shell.

Though the gun doesn't match the American 155mm or 175mm, one of these shells—which could have been shot from as far as eight miles away — landed Friday on a battalion command post at Con Thien, killing nine Marines and wounding 21.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am 16 and very popular. In fact, TOO popular. Please believe me when I say I am still a good girl. I admit I have necked with several guys. (I started to date when I was 13) but I have never done anything I am really ashamed of.

The problem is that I get asked out so much and I like so many guys that sometimes I accept two dates for one night. For example, I'll accept a date with Freddie from 7 til 10, and then I'll tell Teddie to come over at 10:15 and we'll go for a ride or a late show at the drive-in. It has come back to me that I am getting a pretty tacky reputation.

I am only allowed to go out weekend nights and I have a 1:15 curfew which I have never broken. Please tell me how I can improve my reputation. — ANGEL PUSS

Dear Angel: The first thing you can do is cut out the second shift. A gal who has to stagger the traffic gives the impression that she is trying to break some sort of a record.

And I suggest that you make a new rule — "Hands off, one and all." Although you obviously consider yourself virtuous because you are technically intact, I suspect you are crowding the line, which can be risky as well as damaging to a girl's reputation.

Dear Ann Landers: I got plenty darned sore when I read that letter from "Goggle-eyed," the man who claims this is "The Year Of The Rear."

I agree that women's fashions are downright unattractive these days. Anyone with two eyes in his head can see that there is entirely too much leg showing and the skirts are much too tight and too short. But why don't some of the men take a good look at themselves? I am sick and tired of seeing rolls of fat hanging over belt buckles. My husband yells that I am a lousy wife because buttons are missing from his shirts. The buttons do not come off in the laundry as he insists. They pop off when he tries to jam his fat self inside. He sneaks the shirts back into the drawer and then he puts the blame on me.

Sure, some wives are too heavy but many of them have had four or five babies in 10 years. They work like horses and they eat like horses. What's the husbands' excuse? — SIZE 16 AND WISH I WEREN'T

Dear Size 16: Take that and that and that, you fat husbands. But, in all fairness, I must say, Lady, excuses don't count. It's what meets the eye that matters. And the eye is meeting entirely too much flesh these days — both male and female types.

Confidential: To all the physicians who wrote to thank me for defending them against irate patients who were kept waiting (sometimes for hours): I love you, too.

Confidential: To all the patients who wrote to tell me that I am out of my mind when I try to make excuses for physicians who keep patients waiting (sometimes for hours): Sorry, but what I said still goes. A first-rate physician thinks more about people than he thinks about time.

Too many couples go from matrimony to acrimony. Don't let your marriage flop befre it gets started. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage—What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Tribunal Will Not Release Captain Levy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army may confine Capt. Howard B. Levy throughout the review and consideration of any appeals of his sentence for disobedience and disloyalty, the U. S. Court of Military Appeals ruled Friday.

The three civilian judges of the highest military tribunal refused to order Levy's release with or without bail.

It was the second such legal reverse for the 30-year-old Brooklyn physician in two days. A U. S. District Court judge in Columbia, S. C., declined Thursday to grant bail or parole to the officer.

He is under sentence by a court-martial at Ft. Jackson, S. C., to three years in prison and dismissal from the service for refusing to train U. S. Special Forces — Green Beret — medics and for advising servicemen not to serve in Vietnam.

His attorney, Charles Morgan of the Atlanta office of the American Civil Liberties Union, said when the twin petitions were filed they would be appealed to higher courts if denied.

Pending completion of military reviews of the court-martial verdict and sentence, Levy is under guard at the hospital detention building at Ft. Jackson.

Levy's petition was based on the Constitution's First Amendment guarantee of free speech and association, due process provisions of the Fifth Amendment and Eighth Amendment prohibitions against excessive punishment.

The court ruled that neither common law nor the Constitution guarantees the right to bail for a person after conviction and pending appeal and that Congress wrote no bail provisions in the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

The military tribunal noted also that Congress specifically excluded courts-martial cases in passing the Bail Reform Act of 1966.

World's Week In The News

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The world had new troubles to occupy its attention last week: renewed strife in the Congo.

It began Wednesday, when Congolese President Joseph D. Mobutu closed the Congo's frontiers and declared that military aid was needed to repel "foreign aggression" in two eastern Congo provinces.

By Thursday it was apparent that the "foreign aggression" was buttressed by Congolese rebels, in the cities of Bukavu and Kinshasa, formerly Stanleyville.

The next day, Washington supported the Congolese government and condemned the dissident groups in the two cities. The Congolese government said the groups were led by foreign mercenaries and had seized control of the eastern cities. It sought direct U.S. help and U.N. backing.

The Congolese government said the merchants were cooperating with dissident forces from Katanga, home province of former Premier Moise Tshombe. Tshombe was kidnaped last week on an airplane flight and taken to Algeria. Tshombe is under a death sentence in the Congo, which has begun extradition proceedings.

The situation was still confused and unresolved by Friday when a planeload of wounded whites and Africans landed in Rhodesia. The Congolese government said those commanding the plane were mercenaries fleeing from the embattled area of Kinsangani.

Meanwhile, the Congo ambassador to the United Nations revealed there a fantastic plot hatched in Spain in behalf of Tshombe to unseat Mobutu, and the Algerian government told of how Tshombe was detoured into captivity by a gunman in his chartered plane.

The Soviet Union suffered a major diplomatic defeat in the United Nations, and a Western diplomat compared it to the defeat "the Arabs suffered on the battlefield" in the Israeli-Arab crisis.

By a 53-46 vote, a Soviet Union resolution condemning Israel and demanding Israeli withdrawal immediately from all Arab lands captured in the six-day war was defeated last week.

Subsidiary demands, including one for payment of repatriations, were defeated as well.

The Soviet defeat represented no victory for the United States, however. A U.S. resolution on the Middle East crisis and its possible settlement had been withdrawn earlier, and U.S. support had been thrown to a Latin-nations proposal, which also was outvoted.

At week's end, no unified proposal had been agreed upon, and several nations planned to explain their vote on the Soviet proposal

In the Middle East itself, renewed fighting in the Sinai Peninsula was reported throughout the week, while Israel planned measures for allowing Arab refugees to return to their homes in occupied territory, notably on the west bank of the Jordan River.

Another main aim of Israeli policy was to seek the means for demilitarization of the Sinai Peninsula and the Syrian heights around the Sea of Galilee — a strategic spot for attack on the Israeli homeland.

OKAWVILLE, Ill. — Holy Catfish! Hubert Heberer (center) caught so many fish in the Kaskaskia River over the week-end holiday that he had to get a friend and a brother to help him hold up the big cats for a photo. Two fish held by friend Harry Borenpohl (left) weighed 30 and 28 pounds, the fish held by Heberer, Okawville, Ill., tipped the scale at 27 pounds and brother William Heberer (light) holds a cat weighing 26 pounds. 4-H Achievement Day

The 4-H boys and girls are busy getting ready for the Pettis County 4-H Achievement Days to be held July 19-21. If you are a 4-H member and don't have the items in your projects finished, you will want to hurry up your schedule. The 4-H'ers try to finish all their project items before Achievement days so that they can receive ribbons on their exhibits.

If you are interested in entering a demonstration, the grooming contest, public speaking contest, or dress revue, don't forget to notify your club leader so that your entry can be in the office by Friday, July 14.

Keep in mind that the County 4-H Judging Day is on July 20, during the Achievement Days, in which a 4-H member may judge in the following divisions: Nearly all areas in Home Economics, vegetables and woodwork.

During the summer when families are overflowing the beaches, lakes, rivers and pools for fun and relaxation, it should be remembered that about one-third of the drowning victims will be youngsters between 5 and 15 years of age. Also, boys and men account for nearly 87 per cent of the drownings.

Because they are not supervised, farm ponds, streams and rivers are notoriously dangerous. However, lacking other swimming facilities, farm youngsters and others continue to take chances in farm ponds and streams.

Pond bottoms are often filled with a layer of soft mud, making it difficult for a swimmer on bottom to get a firm footing to spring back to the surface of the water.

The water is sometimes muddy, making it almost impossible to locate a person who has gone under the surface. Because of these and other factors, it is important to have an older person present who is an experienced swimmer whenever the pond is to be used for swimming.

Even if a group is swimming in a pond, it is best to always swim with a buddy. Then, if something happens, the person is missed right away.

Setting up emergency lifesaving equipment is a first step that should be taken before anyone is allowed to swim in a pond.

This equipment consists of an inner tube with a length of rope attached, a long pole such as fence post on which the equip- a bamboo fishing pole, and a fence post on which the equipment is fastened.

World Week In Business

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business Writer

NEW YOR K(AP) — The biggest stockholder family was jolted this past week when the Federal Communications Commission clamped a lid on American Telephone & Telegraph Co. profits.

The FCC, after a long investigation of the giant utility's financial structure, ordered AT&T to operate its interstate and foreign operations within a profit range of 7 to 7.5 per cent. These operations account for about 25 per cent of the company's total revenues.

And the FCC ordered AT&T to cut its interstate rates by $120 million a year — about 3 per cent of its earnings from this source.

The immediate impact was to send AT&T stock to a new 1967 low on the New York Stock Exchange on Thursday. The issue closed at $54.25 a share, off $1.50.

AT&T is the most widely held stock on the big board, with more than three million investors owning 539.6 million shares.

The stock has been under pressure since the FCC investigation was announced Oct. 27, 1965. On that date it sold at $66.87.

AT&T's profits on its interstate and foreign services have been running about 8 per cent.

In 1966, AT&T earned $1.9 billion, or $3.69 a share. An investment analyst estimated that earnings would have been 12 cents a share lower if return on investment had been held to 7.25 per cent.

This analyst said the key factor is whether the FCC decision spreads to the regulatory commissions in the 50 states. If the states should adopt similar restrictions on operations within theis borders, he said, the combined cuts could reduce AT&T's over-all earnings by an amount equal to 57 cents a share on 1966 earnings.

AT&T called the order "most disappointing."

"If allowed to stand for the long pull," the company said, "this restriction on our earnings prospects would inevitably slow down our effort to provide constantly more and better communications service to the public."

It added that company officials were reviewing the order "to determine what steps we should take to obtain modifications of its restrictive provisions."

In the automobile industry, General Motors and Ford reported sales increases in June over a year earlier, but Chrysler showed a decline.

General Motors dealers sold 412,347 new cars, up 5.2 per cent from 381,593 in June 1966. Ford's sales climbed to 279,097 last month from 256,280 a year earlier. Chrysler sales dipped to 124,466 from 125,280.

Production in June of 762,000 cars and 152,200 trucks, a total of 914,000, was the highest for any month this year. It compared with the year's previous monthly high of 906,481 in May.

Because of the Fourth of July holiday, output this past week dropped to 131,128 cars from 172,463 last week.

General Motors, Ford and Chrysler are scheduled to open talks Monday with the United Auto Workers on new three-year contracts. The current agreement expires Sept. 6.

Steel production fell for the week to the lowest level since December 1965. Output of 2,173,000 tons was off 3.4 per cent from 2.25 million tons the previous week.

The Federal Reserve Board reported thtt consumer credit on the installment plan rose by only $193 million during May, the smallest advance in more thad five years.

The advance prought installment credit outstanding as of May 31 to a record $74.29 billion.

The board said the small expansion stemmed partly from heavy repayments which continued at or near record levels for all types of credit.

Sniper Kills Young Couple In Vancouver

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — A sallow, slender, middle-aged bachelor who collected guns as a hobby was charged with murder Friday for the sniper slaying of a young couple and the wounding of two women.

Arthur John Towell, 35, described by police as an Air Force veteran with a history of mental instability, faces two counts of first degree murder and two of attempted murder.

He was taken before Magistrate James Bartmen, who set July 14 for entering a plea.

Police said Towell surrendered meekly after a wild and apparently senseless shooting spree Thursday night from upstairs windows of his parents' home in a quiet Vancouver residential neighborhood.

Killed in the brief fusillade of a dozen or more shots were David D. A. Webster, 31, an assistant professor of education at nearby University of British Columbia, and his wife, Marlene, 30. Their four children, aged 6 months to 10 years, were orphaned.

Wounded and hospitalized in fair condition were Mrs. Patti Barrass, 19, a recent bride, and Mrs. Hilda Baxter, 56, of Powell River, B.C. who was babysitting with her five grandchildren.

The Websters were cut down just before dusk in the backyard of their home next door to the Towell residence. Mrs. Baxter was directly across the street in the home of her son-in-law, F. R. Adams. Mrs. Barrass was walking along a sidewalk with a friend.

Towell, about 5-10 and 140 pounds, sent his mother running outside when police surrounded the house, crying "Don't shoot! Don't shoot! My son will surrender."

He came out with his hands up and offered no resistance.

Inside, officers found an arsenal of 13 guns, several hundred rounds of handmade ammunition, army ammunition pouches, a bayonet and two army knives. The weapons included three pistols, a shotgun, an army automatic rifle and eight other rifles.

Police Staff Sgt. William Porteous said there was no motive for the shootings.

"The man just went berserk," he said.

Demobilization Begins

Israel's Plan Modeled After King Solomon's

By DENNIS NEELD

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The mailmen and taxi drivers, waiters, printers and farmers are drifting back to work as Israel starts cutting its citizen's army.

With the Arab threat to Israel's existence largely removed, reservists, who make up the bulk of this country's military force in times of crisis, slowly are being released back to their civilian jobs.

The mechanics of mobilization and demobilization are closely guarded secrets in Israel, but some facts are clear.

When threatened, Israel can field a fighting force of almost 250,000 men, 10 per cent of its population and five times the size of its regular army.

Mobilization in this little country of 7,300 square miles goes like well-oiled clockwork. The army can have its reservists in action within 48 hours.

Women as well as men are called to the colors, the girls doing largely office duties in military establishments and communications centers.

Israel's mobilization plan is modeled on that of King Solomon 3,000 years ago.

His fortress at Megiddo included storage space for food and wine for 5,000 men and room for 300 chariots. The stables were built for only 30 horses.

For a long time the fortress was regarded as a curiosity. Further research, however, revealed that if war loomed the 30 horses would be saddled up and regular troops would gallop out summoning the citizenry to arms.

Israel in 1967 adopts a simliar plan.

The regular army has only about 60,000 troops organized in four 4,000 man brigades plus a separate armored command of division size.

The reserve has 24 brigades, one-third of them armored, amounting to more than 200,000 soldiers.

When the call comes, almost half the total adult male population joins up. Buses, taxis and private cars take the reservists to their units. Many hitchhike and others report for duty in their milk trucks and bread delivery vans.

They may look a scruffy, oddly garbed lot, but every man is a trained soldier. They can be in action within hours.

Military service is almost universal in Israel, claiming all men and women between the ages of 17½ and 18½. Only Arabs, mothers, pregnant women and women for whom military service would violate religious principles are exempt.

Even the Druze people, who belong to a sect that broke from Islam centuries ago, are conscripted—and considered excellent fighters. Their loyalty to Israel is regarded as beyond question.

Girl soldiers serve for 18 months, men for 2½ years. They get $5 a month. When released from conscripted service they are assigned to front-line reserve units until they are 39, then transferred to home guard or civil defense forces until they are 50.

Every year the reservists do a period of field training and are liable for regular weapon instruction sessions and target practice.

The troops are mobilized by code phrases broadcast over the radio and flashed on movie screens. Others are called up personally by comrades-in-arms who come to their homes and tell them to get ready—usually within the hour.

"Open Window," "Wedding March," "Men at Work" and "Lovers of Zion,' are examples of code names.

Every man knows his call sign and few fail to report for duty. Most units are made up of troops who have known each other for years and every man knows his alotted task. Refresher courses are unnecessary and reserve units are dispatched promptly to strategic positions.

War Deaths Listed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Missourians are on a casualty list from Vietnam.

Listed by the Defense Department as killed in action is Marine Lance Cpl. Monty R. Sewell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie M. Sewell, Joplin.

Changed from the list of missing to dead from hostile action is Army Spec.4 William A. June, son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. June, St. Louis.

W. Germany Plans To Cut Down Army

BONN, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger announced plans Friday to cut West Germany's 461,000-man army to enable his government to balance its budgets for the next four years.

The move will put West Germany even further away from meeting its commitment to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, for an army of 500,000 men. West Germany has never met this pledge.

Kiesinger did not specify how many men would be cut but reliable tstimates put the figure at 40,000 to 60,000.

The reduction will cut further into the strength of Western armies in Europe. The United States announced in May that it would withdraw 35,000 of its 225,000 soldiers, sailors and airmen in this country. Britain has said it will pull out 5,000 of its 55,000-man Rhine army.

Britain and the United States made these decisions because West Germany said it was no longer able to offset the foreign exchange costs of these troops by arms purchases.

In Washington, Robert J. McCloskey, State Department press officer, said the United States would oppose any troop cutback by West Germany without consultation among the NATO allies.

Asked about McCloskey's statement, West German officials said there will be consultations with West Germany's allies before any troop cuts actually take place.

Kiesinger announced also that there would be cuts in arms and equipment purchases for the West German army, and reductions in civil defense expenditures.

He said the measures are part of a financial and economic plan designed to balance budgets for the next four years and to get West Germany's stagnant economy going again.

Kiesinger's Cabinet reached the decisions after three days of meetings, which ended with a marathon 15-hour session Thursday night.

The measures include a new business turnover tax which will be pegged at 10.5 per cent beginning next year and a 3 per cent rise in income tax for those earning more than $4,000 a year.

The cuts in the defense budget, amounting to $500 million in 1968, were the largest in the $20-billion budget for the year.

A total of $4.7 billion will be spent on defense in 1969 and the amount will rise to $5 billion in 1971.

Killed In Fall From Hay Truck Friday

CLINTON, Mo. (AP) — James Earl Jones, 18, of Clinton was killed instantly Friday afternoon when he fell from a hay truck on Missouri 18 one mile west of here, the Highway Patrol said.

Jones and three other Clinton youths had been hauling hay from a nearby farm. Kenneth Lee Buckley, 16, was riding on the back of the truck with Jones, officers said. The two others were in the cab.

Steps In Viet Involvement

EDITOR'S NOTE--There are now some 460,000 U.S. troops locked in major war in Vietnam. They may be joined soon by even more. Their journey to Southeast Asia was made over a twisted and sometimes confused road of government decision. Their mass presence there today was unforeseen and unplanned for. How they got to Vietnam despite early firm objections to a U.S. war commitment on the Asian land mass is outlined in the following article based on interviews with many of the men who shaped U.S. policy.

By FRED HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most U.S. military chiefs in the critical early 1960s were firmly opposed to committing American troops to fight on the ground in South Vietnam or Laos.

Few U.S. civilian or military policymakers foresaw that President John F. Kennedy's 1961 decision to broaden aid and advice to South Vietnam would lead to today's massive U.S. involvement.

Thus, there was no real advance planning for the kind of U.S. combat troop commitment which President Johnson ordered in 1965, after the South Vietnamese army was all but routed by the Communists.

These were some of the more striking points emerging from wide-ranging Associated Press interviews aimed at illuminating the thinking and the recommendations that figured in the U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

Echoing through certain of these interviews were deep divisions of viewpoint among some of the men who advised Kennedy and Johnson as these presidents tried to find answers to the Vietnam dilemma.

Roger Hilsman, a former assistant secretary of state, argued that Johnson made a tragic mistake in "over-Americanizing the war," as Hilsman put it, by introducing U.S. ground forces and by bombing North Vietnam.

Frederick Nolting, onetime ambassador to Saigon, contended the big error was committed in the Kennedy administration. Nolting charged some officials condoned the 1963 overthrow of South Vietnamese President Ngo Dinh Diem. This, the former envoy said, created a political vacuum which sucked in this country as a major combatant.

Nearly two dozen pivotal figures were reached by the AP in Southeast Asia, Europe and the United States in exploring the decisions that shaped the U.S. role.

These men were past and present U.S. officials, both civilian and military, who were in the eye of hurricane at one stage or another.

Some spoke for the record. Others refused to be quoted. Still others rejected requests for interviews.

Most of those who did talk declined to discuss specific recommendations on ground these still are classified.

Their words presented a kaleidoscope of views.

They ranged from former Undersecretary of State George Ball who opposed Kennedy's crucial 1961 decision to enlarge the American advisory role, to Adm. George W. Anderson, retired chief of naval operations, who believes the time to have solved the Indochina problem was in 1954 when France asked for American air power to help its forces, against the Communist Vietminh besieging Dien Bien Phu.

Most of the U.S. military chiefs in the 1961-1962-1963 period were against getting enmeshed in a land war in Southeast Asia.

They successfully opposed sending U.S. forces into Laos when the matter came up for decision in 1962, at a time when it appeared the Communist Pathet Lao and their North Vietnamese backers might take over that land-locked kingdom.

It is equally clear that most key U.S. military leaders in those years had no real thought of committing American combat troops.

They felt the expanded advisory operation would work. They admit there were no detailed plans laid for supporting the kind of U.S. military buildup which finally was ordered by Johnson in mid-1965, when the South Vietnamese army was at its rope's end.

Ball warned Kennedy in late 1961 that increasing the American military presence from the 700-plus advisers, maintained under the 1954 Geneva agreement, to a contemplated 15,000 would start the United States on the road to a huge commitment from which it would be hard to disentangle.

Now, some 5½ years after Kennedy made his decision on the advice of other top aides, there are about 460,000 Americans locked in a major war in Vietnam.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and Secretary of State Dean Rusk argued against Ball's premise and Kennedy sided with them, Ball indicated.

Ball thinks Kennedy was convinced—in the wake of the Cuban Bay of Pigs debacle several months earlier—that he had to show strength everywhere, and that the situation in Vietnam seemed to demand such a demonstration of anti-Communist firmness.

Hilsman, then head of the State Department's Intelligence Bureau, supported the Kennedy policy, which he cast in terms of a strategy rather than a U.S. military solution.

Johnson's blunder was to "Americanize" the war by committing U.S. forces to battle, thus turning from Kennedy's policy aimed at keeping it a South Vietnamese war, he said.

Hilsman, a Kennedy appointee as assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs, resigned in March 1964, about four months after Johnson succeeded to the presidency.

He said he felt he had to leave because he could see gradual escalation coming.

Some five months after Hilsman quit, the United States and North Vietnam had their first clash of arms in the Gulf of Tonkin. That was in early August 1964.

The United States opened sustained bombing of North Vietnam nearly a year after Hilsman's departure from the government, and introduced ground combat forces soon after the bombing campaign began.

Kennedy acted after receiving a report on Nov. 3, 1961, from Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, his military adviser. He had sent Taylor and Walt W. Rostow, a special assistant for national security affairs, to Vietnam to size up the problem on the ground.

After returning, Taylor recommended that the U.S. advisory force be enlarged manyfold, that the South Vietnamese army be expanded and given more American training and equipment, and that the United States furnish its Army helicopter companies to carry Vietnamese soldiers to battle against the Communist Viet Cong.

But the general laid the groundwork for further steps, including direct action against North Vietnam. He told Kennedy in his report:

"If the Hanoi decision is to continue the irregular war declared on South Vietnam in 1959 with continued infiltration and covert support of guerrilla bands in the territory of our ally, we will then have to decide whether to accept as legitimate the continued guidance, training and support of a guerrilla war across an international boundary, while the attacked react only inside their borders.

"It is clear to me that the time may come in our relations to Southeast Asia when we must declare our intention to attack the source of guerrilla aggression in North Vietnam and impose on the Hanoi government a price for participating in the current war which is commensurate with the damage being inflicted on its neighbors to the south."

Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, currently executive of an electronics firm in Chatsworth, Calif., indicated strongly that he favored bombing North Vietnam as long ago as early 1962. He was Air Force chief of staff at the time. This was about three years before the bombing offensive opened on Feb. 7, 1965.

"We have been using air and naval power in a piddling manner," LeMay told a reporter.

"If we had done what we are doing now five years ago, as I recommended, the shock effect might have stopped then, but it's too late for this now.

"Today, there is only one way of ending the war, and that is to say, 'Look, we're not going to let you invade your neighbor any longer—we'll destroy everything you have if necessary.'

"I don't mean destroy the population but simply to deprive the population of the things they need to carry on their invasion of the South."

"We will never be able to clean up Vietnam," he predicted.

"The only way is to make the North Vietnamese stop supporting the invasion of the South. You can do this by invading, or by using air and naval power."

Adm. Anderson said U.S. leaders, during his years on the Joint Chiefs of Staff, hoped a large scale U.S. commmitment "never would take place."

"President Eisenhower made the decision that the United States would not go in without others," Anderson recalled.

He was with an official American party that went to Europe to sound out the British, then returned with word that Britain would not take part in such an effort.

Adm. Arthur W. Radford was chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff at that time and was a leader of the U.S. group that talked with British government officials about joint intervention.

One source close to Radford said, "It made sense for us to help the French because we would not then have had to put in troops."

But, this source said, the French wanted a one-time U.S. effort from the air. "We couldn't get in the war and then get out," he added.

At a White House news conference on March 10, 1954, Eisenhower pledged that "there is going to be no involvement of America in war unless it is a result of the constitutional process that is placed upon Congress to declare it."

Three years later, after the Geneva agreement separating Vietnam into Communist and non-Communist halves, Eisenhower backed free Vietnam with a promise of continued U.S. assistance against growing Communist pressure.

Eisenhower joined with Diem, who was visiting Washington in May 1957, in a statement declaring any Red aggression or subversion threatening the political independence of South Vietnam "would be considered as endangering peace and stability" in the area.

He assured Diem "of the willingness of the United States to continue to offer effective assistance within the constitutional process of the United States."

State Department officials cited this Eisenhower statement as one of the significant declarations binding the United States to the fate of South Vietnam.

Anderson said earlier action should have been taken to introduce large American combat forces.

"This should have been done not later than the beginning of 1964," said Anderson, who is on the board of a major airline after serving as U.S. ambassador to Portugal.

"The U.S. should have gone into North Vietnam from the Pacific side, at Vinh," the former Navy boss said. "We could then have cut off North Vietnam from South Vietnam. It would have given us the best access into Laos."

Anderson retired July 31, 1963. By that time, he said, there was definite evidence that material was coming down from the North. He couldn't recall whether organized units yet had shown up from the North, but he said "there were North Vietnamese advisers in there.

"We should have committed U.S. combat power when men and equipment began coming down," Anderson asserted.

He refused to say whether he talked that way in the councils of the Joint Chiefs.

Anderson told of the proposal to send U.S. forces into Laos during the 1962 crisis there, saying the objective was to support a coalition government containing Communists. He did not say who made the proposal.

"The military chiefs did not go along with putting in U.S. forces for that kind of political objective," he said.

Other U.S. military men said the reason the chiefs lined up against the idea of committing American troops in Laos was something quie different.

"I certainly did not want to get the Army bogged in a place like Laos," said one former high officer who asked that his name be omitted.

What he meant was that Laos is a logistician's nightmare. There are very few good roads, no railroads, only a scattering of modern airports. A supply line to support any sizable American force in Laos would have to stretch all the way through Thailand to the Gulf of Siam.

Anderson harked back to the twilight of France's dominance of Indochina, and said that "through a lack of a collective effort, we lost the great opportunity to win a military victory in time."

This, he said, happened in 1954 when the French had their backs to the wall at Dien Bien Phu, in the northwestern part of what is today North Vietnam.

The French appealed to the United States for air power against the Communist Vietminh encircling French troops there.

Gen. David M. Shoup, former Marine Corps commandant who sat on the Joint Chiefs in the early 1960s, said in a recent interview that "I was against getting involved in a ground war in Asia."

"I was in favor of doing anything our commitment would cause us to do up to the point where we put in combat units," said the World War II Medal of Honor winner.

"When they began to put in combatant units whose function was to destroy the enemy," said the retired Marine commandant, "I was very fearful of the outcome of such a commitment."

Did he speak in those terms while on the Joint Chiefs?

"I took an oath that I would never discuss my part in any official JCS discussions," Shoup replied.

Gen. Paul D. Harkins, who became chief of the greatly expanded U.S. military assistance operation in February 1962, said "I thought of our stay in Vietnam as advisers as a limited one. I thought the advisers would be there until the South Vietnamese got the guerrillas under control."

Harkins, in retirement in Dallas, Texas, said that in 1963 "if everything had gone according to plans, I felt we would lessen our commitment in 1965."

Diem was overthrown in November 1963 and the country was thrown into political turmoil that lasted about 18 months, with military coup following coup.

Harkins contended the ouster of Diem and the resulting confusion—on which the Viet Cong are generally acknowledged to have capitalized—fouled up the projection that the U.S. commitment could be cut down by the end of 1965.

He said his last recommendation—before giving way to Gen. William C. Westmoreland in June 1964—was to continue the advisory role and aid program much as it had been conducted under Diem.

Harkins asserted he never asked for U.S. fighting troops.

"We had no thought of actually sending in combat troops" throughout the time he was in command in Vietnam, Harkins said. When he left, there were about 20,000 American military men serving as advisers in the country.

Adm. Harry D. Felt, over-all commander of U.S. forces in the Pacific from July 1958 to July 1964, said he doubts in retrospect that the United States would have made any different decisions in the conduct of the Vietnam war.

However, Felt conceded, "we might have made them a little faster."

The admiral, living in retirement in Honolulu, suggested public opinion figured in what he called a reluctance to move a little faster in making certain decisions.

"It was difficult for a great many people in the general public to understand the real threat and escalation on the part of

Nigeria Will Try to Regain Lost Lands

LAGOS, Ngeria (AP) — A drive by Nigerian federal troops into Biafra is aimed at the arrest of the governor who led that Eastern territory to secede May 30, a military spokesman said Saturday. The governor is Lt. Col. Odumegwu Ojukwu.

'If we can get him today, that's it," the spokesman said, implying that the capture of Ojukwu would mean an end to this latest of the African wars.

The governor and Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, head of the federal military government, had feuded for months before Ojukwu broke away and proclaimed his bailiwick, with 14 million of Nigeria's 56 million inhabitants, to be an independent republic.

The spokesman said 500 Biafrans, mostly raw recruits, were captured in the overrunning of a training camp Friday between the towns of Obudu and Ogoja, 10 miles below the border between the former Eastern region and Northern Nigeria.

Federal and Biafran troops battled on in rainy weather over hilly terrain in the third day of a fight in which each claims to have inflicted heavy casualties on the other. Rival radio stations broadcast sometimes conflicting accounts of the struggle.

Radio Kaduna, in the north, said Nigerian forces were within 20 miles of Enugu, the Biafran capital, which is 300 miles east of Lagos.

Without confirming this account, the Lagos station Radio Nigeria said federal troops had captured the towns of Obudu and Obolo and were pressing deep into the oil-rich territory in a hunt for Ojukwu.

Radio Enugu declared Eastern forces had repulsed the government soldiers, though there was fierce fighting "on four fronts."

The federal government denied the Biafran charges that it is using white mercenaries to lead its troops and in turn declared Ojukwu was employing white mercenaries.

The Nigerian Air Force commandeered five twin-engined DC3 transports from Nigeria Airways, but the spokesman refused to say how they would be used.

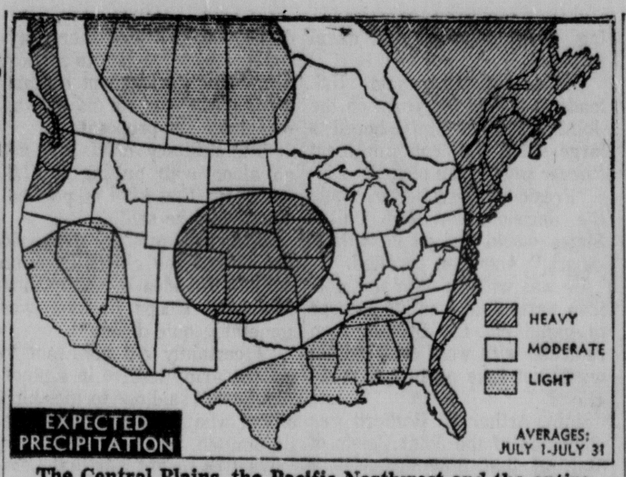
The spokesman said intelligence sources reported about 2,000 Biafran troops were concentrated around Nsukka, 40 miles north of Enugu on the main road linking Eastern Nigeria with the rest of the country.

About 3,000 other rebel troops were said to be to the east in th Ogoja sector, which borders the Cameroons.

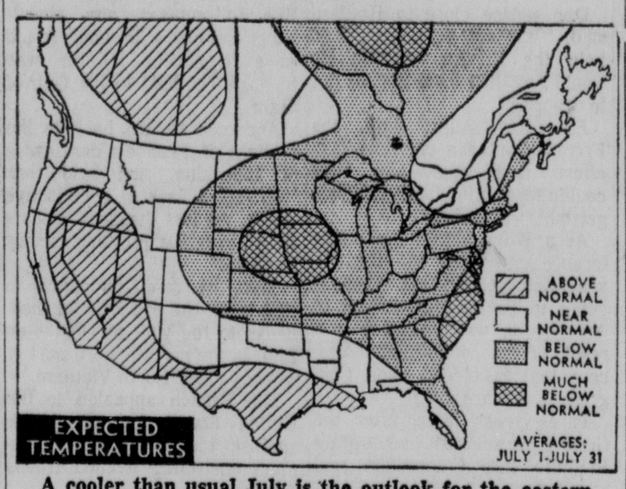
Nigeria, most populous of African nations, is a former British colony.

Reds To Meet

WARSAW (AP) — Poland plans a week of mass meetings starting Monday to demonstrate solidarity with the Communists in Vietnam, the press agency PAP reported. It said personnel from the North Vietnamese Embassy and the Viet Cong mission in Warsaw will attend rallies.



The Central Plains, the Pacific Northwest and the entire Atlantic Seaboard are in for heavier than normal precipitation. The Southwest and Gulf Coast will be drier.



A cooler than usual July is the outlook for the eastern two-thirds of the nation, balanced by above-normal temperatures in the Southwest and much of the Gulf Coast.

Two Boys Killed When A Train Hits Their Car

GLEN ST. MARY, Fla. (AP) — Two young boys, left alone in a car stalled on a railroad grade crossing while their father ran for help, were killed instantly Saturday when an express train demolished the automobile, the Florida Highway Patrol said.

The father, identified as James W. Blankenship, was in a nearby grocery store when the New Orleans-to-Jacksonville passenger train of the Seaboard Coast Line hit the car.

The dead boys, Todd and Britt, were said to be 2 and 4 years old.

After the collision Blankenship ran down the tracks, according to witnesses, as if he were pursuing the train, which stopped quickly. Then he went to the crushed auto and lifted one boy's body from the wreckage, laying it under a tree beside his brother who had been thrown clear.

Reports Indicate USSR Consumers Are Overcharged

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet consumer—already making do with limited spending money and a poor assortment of goods —is being overcharged in a number of stores, the government newspaper Izvestia said Saturday.

It said a recent check uncovered "crude violations of retail prices in some organizations and trade enterprises." The paper did not say whether these violations were intentional or accidental, but added: "It is necessary to make wide use of public measures of punishment for violators of trade rules . . ."

The government has ordered a crackdown to prevent further violations of retail trade laws, the paper said. One step will be a requirement that the state-fixed price be stamped on all goods, Izvestia added.

Red China Accuses Indian Minister Of Forming New Alliance

TOKYO (AP) — Communist China accused Indian Foreign Minister M. C. Chagla Sunday of attempting to form an anti-Chinese military alliance with India's neighbors.

Peking's official New China News Agency said Chagla told Parliament July 3 that the Indian government was considering a conference with Burma, Nepal and Ceylon to cope with Communist China.

"Evidently," the agency said, "this is an attempt to knock together an anti-China military alliance under the control of Indian reactionaries."

Pope Paul Will End Special Audiences

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI will suspend special and private audiences for the summer starting July 16, the Vatican announced, but general weekly audiences will continue to be held at 11 a.m. Wednesdays. These will be in the courtyard in his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo after he goes there toward the end of July to stay until around Sept. 10.

Egypt Blames Israel For New Fighting

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — A representative of Egypt charged Saturday that the latest Israeli-Egyptian clashes in the Suez area are part of a deliberate scheme to inflame the Middle East in a new war with the "support and encouragement of certain powers."

Ambassador Mohamed Awad El Kony told the U.N. Security Council that Israel "is determined to escalate the military actions in the Middle East" and that it could not do so "unless there is an unprecedented collusion between Israel and certain powers which are . . . trying to remain in disguise."

He did not name these countries, but he charged there was "participation of the United States and the United Kingdom governments in the Israeli aggression of the 5th of June."

The Egyptian representative demanded condemnation of Israel for allegedly breaking the June 10 cease-fire and urged that the council remain in continuous session until such action was taken.

Israeli Ambassador Gideon Rafael retorted it was Egypt that was trying to set aside the cease-fire. He said more than 40 Israeli soldiers had been killed in alleged attacks by Egyptian forces.

"It is the policy of the government of Israel," he said, "not only to preserve the cease-fire but to do its best to see it reinforced . . . but it appears that the government of the United Arab Republic, for reasons of its own, is set on eroding the cease-fire away."

He called this "Egypt's policy of belligerency adapted to new circumstances."

"There have been a number of strident and bellicose statements announcing that the hostilities are not terminated but are to be continued," he stated.

Rafael denied that Israeli forces had, in any instance, violated the cease-fire, and declared that it had had no alternative but to attempt to knock out guns that were firing on Israeli forces.

He said Saturday's event had "been clearly planned by the Egyptian authorities."

Secretary-General U Thant had told the council earlier that he was not able to report on the actual sequence of events in the Suez zone because the council had not authorized him to station U.N. observers on the Israeli-Egyptian front. He disclosed that he had approached Israel and Egypt on the possibility of stationing observers there, but had no replies.

At the suggestion of Mali, the council recessed for consultations.

New Zealand Will Change Its Currency

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (AP) — With 750,000 account statements and myriad cash and paper sums involved, New Zealand banks this weekend had their busiest days ever preparing for the switch of the nation's currency Monday from pounds and shillings to dollars and cents. Tellers reported thousands of aged and musty bank notes turned up from hiding places.

Robber Holds Up Bank In Leavenworth

LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) —A slightly-built masked bank robber hopped on the counter of the walk-up window at a drive-in bank Saturday, flashed a gun and squeezed feet-first through a small teller's window, then helped himself to more than $10,000.

His companion stood outside during the robbery muttering "Hurry up, let's go."

The two had parked a green panel truck in the Manufacturer's State bank lot just before the episode about 11:30 a.m.

Minutes after the robbery the truck was found a block and a half away from the bank and police began looking for a getaway car, possibly driven by a third member of the band.

Linda Jo Wacke, 23, was along in the drive-in facility when she saw the truck drive up.

She told police and FBI agents the man using a nylon stocking as a mask walked to the counter told her 'This is loaded" as he waved a pistol.

"Fill it up" he said, pushing

Startled, she backed away and a paper bag through the window. the man promptly squeezed through the opening, about a foot high and 18 inches wide.

He told her to lie on the floor and he began helping himself to currency, leaving about $300 in the till. Then he saw a bank pouch with a padlock lying on a vault and demanded the key. Miss Wacker said she told him there was nothing but paper in the container, then gave him the key and he transferred his loot to the pouch.

He shoved the young woman into a back room and left. She called the main office and police were notified.

Loss of the bank pouch promised some headaches for the bank — it contained deposit slips and checks presented to the drive-in facility late Friday and waiting for transfer to the main bank.

Vivien Leigh Dies of TB In London

LONDON (AP) — Actress Vivien Leigh who won an Oscar in 1939 and rose to international stardom by playing Scarlet O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind," died Saturday.

She won another Oscar 12 years later for her portrayal of neurotic Blanche du Bois in "A Streetcar Named Desire."

The 53-year-old actress was found dead in bed in her London apartment after a reccurance of tuberculosis, an illness which had dominated her life since 1945. She suffered frequent collapses and in 1960 lost a baby she was expecting shortly before her divorce from Sir Laurence Olivier.

Miss Leigh was stricken ill a month ago as she was to start rehearsals for the London stage production of Edward Albee's "A Delicate Balance."

She was one of Britain's most accomplished and versatile modern actresses.

She and her second husband, Sir Laurence, won international acclaim in the twin productions, Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra" and George Bernard Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra."

She was the first actress in theatrical history to try Shakespeare's and Shaw's Cleopatra in sequence—and succeed in both.

Miss Leigh and Olivier were married in 1940 following her divorce from her first husband, Herbert Leigh Holman, a British lawyer, after eight years of marriage.

She had a daughter by that marriage.

Olivier, now married to actress Joan Plowright and himself under treatment for prostate cancer, visited his former wife's home for half an hour after her death was announced.

Slim, with a heart-shaped face and twinkling gray eyes, Miss Leigh aimed only at acting success.

Born in India of an English father and Irish mother, she left an English convent at 14 and studied drama in Germany and France.

Miss Leigh was appearing on the London stage when she first read Margaret Mitchell's massive Civil War novel, "Gone With the Wind." She promised fellow actresses that if she ever went to Hollywood it would be play Scarlett O'Hara.

In late 1938 the filming of "Gone With the Wind" had begun but the lead actress not yet chosen. Hollywood's top actresses, including Katherine Hepburn and Bette Davis, were scrambling for the part.

Then little-known Miss Leigh, who was in Hollywood on a two-week holiday, took a screen test and won the part.

She played opposite Clark Gable's Rhett Butler and the film went on to set box-office records for a generation. Miss Leigh received only $16,800 for her Oscar-winning role.

Hanoi and the Viet Cong," Felt said.

"Our buildup of our advisers came after a lot of hard soul-searching. But whether it would have made a difference in the war effort if the buildup were faster is hard to say."

Felt predicted in January 1963 that victory over the Communist guerrillas in South Vietnam would come in three years, or early 1966.

Like Harkins and Nolting — as well as a number of other senior military figures including Anderson—Felt attributed the subsequent setbacks to the chaos flowing from Diem's overthrow.

Former Ambassador Nolting, currently a banker living in Paris, said the "principal error occurred during the last months of the Kennedy administration" when, he said, some U.S. officials encouraged the ouster of Diem, who was slain by rebellious Vietnamese officers on Nov. 2, 1963.

Some of those U.S. officials "are still in key positions in our government," the former diplomat said. He did not name them.

"President Johnson inherited an extremely grave and deteriorating situation in late 1963," Nolting said. "I think he recognized the blunder that had been made but failed to give himself room for maneuver by saying so."

In response to questions, the former envoy to South Vietnam expressed "my belief that, had it not been for the overthrow of President Diem, there would never have been the need for the commitment of U.S. combat forces."

Nolting was U.S. ambassador in Saigon from May 1961 to August 1963.

Nolting was replaced by Henry Cabot Lodge only about three months before Diem's overthrow and death. By the time of Nolting's replacement, Diem already was in deep trouble with the Buddhists of his country.

The Vietnamese president's methods of dealing with the Buddhists and other opponents alienated some top U.S. authorities in Washington.

Lodge resigned in June 1964 to take part in Republican presidential politics that campaign year.

Gen. Taylor, who had moved from the White House to the chairmanship of the Joint Chiefs in October 1962, was rushed to place Lodge in July 1964.

Taylor went to Vietnam, firm in the conviction that U.S. troops should not be committed to the war.

He believed that to do so would amount to a defeat because, in his view, it would put the United States back where the French had been. The French, he felt, had arrayed 400,000 men in Indochina—and still couldn't win over the Vietminh.

Taylor's outlook on committing U.S. combat forces began to change toward the end of 1964. Three factors contributed to this change, which finally jelled early 1965. They were:

(1) Intelligence showed that Communist strength had increased far beyond American and South Vietnamese expectations, (2) meanwhile the effectiveness of the South Vietnamese army had diminished—despite U.S. advisers, equipment and support, and (3) Westmoreland had made a strong case for putting in U.S. troops to protect American bases in South Vietnam.

On Nov. 1, 1964 — just a year after Diem's assassination — the Viet Cong mortared the Bien Hoa air base, killing four Americans, wounding 31 and blowing up six B57 bombers.

From that point on, Taylor recommended bombing the North.

About this time, too, other members of the Joint thiefs fell in line with LeMay on carrying the war to the North.

They were influenced to a considerable extent by the appearance of more and more North Vietnamese regulars in the South.

The makeup of the Joint Chiefs had changed by this time.

The attack on Bien Hoa intensified the debate at the higher levels of government over whether to escalate the war.

Ball, an unswerving opponent of escalation, submitted a 100-page memorandum attempting to shoot down the arguments advanced by the activists in the State and Defense Departments.

About the time of his 1964 resignation, Hilsman forwarded a memo to Johnson, with copies distributed to Rusk, McNamara, the Joint Chiefs and the Central Intelligence Agency.

"In my judgment the major effort had to be to win the population," Hilsman said recently.

"I felt that over—Americanizing the war, using U.S. ground forces, would alienate the population and that overmilitarizing the war, bombing the North, would force us to negotiate, which would have brought trouble since the population was not yet sufficiently won over."

Hilsman's memorandum restated his contention that a political approach was the answer, with U.S. military power used to deter the Communist side from escalating.

Hilsman pictured McNamara and Rostow as chief opponents of the Kennedy strategy.

When comment was sought from McNamara, his spokesman gave AP a statement which said:

"Secretary McNamara's position in February 1964 was that the war in Vietnam was a guerrilla war that had to be fought by Vietnamese countering the local Viet Cong guerrillas. He told Congress on Feb. 3, 1964:

"'I don't believe we can take on that combat task for them. . . I don't believe we should have our men there to substitute for Vietnamese who are qualified to carry out the task.'

"That was the policy of President Kennedy at the time of his death. It was a policy supported by Secretary McNamara, not opposed by him.

"The situation changed when North Vietnam introduced combat forces into the war. It was then necessary for the United States to introduce its combat forces."

Rostow, who remained on under Johnson and is a special assistant to the President, declined to be interviewed or to make any statement.

The decisive event in changing the character of the war came Feb. 7, 1965, when the Viet Cong mortared the U.S. compound and Camp Holloway at Pleiku in the central highlands of South Vietnam.

U.S. air attacks were launched against North Vietnam within hours. The White House said the action "was in response to provocations ordered and directed by the Hanoi regime." The air war escalated steadily from there.

Ball doesn't like the bombing in part because, in his opinion, it gets the United States in deeper.

But, Ball says, "I agree with the President's policy" on Vietnam.

"I do not know what else we can do," he admits. "I wish I did, but I don't."

Mays, Mantle Be Substitutes

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) —The favored National League, still smarting from the 1966 World Series disaster, takes dead aim at a record fifth straight All-Star game victory over the American League Tuesday in a unique twilight game at Anaheim Stadium.

In an effort to gain wider fan appeal, Commmissioner Willia D. Eckert has set a 4:15 p.m. PDT (7:15 p.m. EDT) starting time for the contest. That will take the telecast over NBC into prime evening hours in the eastern section of the country.

Willie Mays and Mickey Mantle will play unusual walk-on roles as substitutes when the teams renew their midsummer rivalry with the 38th of the series. The National League, once outdistanced and humiliated by the American League, now owns a 19-17-1 edge and boasts a four-game winning streak.

Walter Alston of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Hank Bauer of the Baltimore Orioles, the managers of last year's Series rivals, meet again under somewhat different circumstances. Both the Dodgers and the Orioles have been rolling around in the second division most of the year. If both make it to the Series again, it willl be a shocking upset.

Just as has been the case all year, Alston no longer has Sandy Koufax to fall back on as a starting pitcher. Sandy's role probably will be taken by Juan Marichal of the San Francisco Giants although Alston has a fine eight-man staff, and he might decide to go to Ferguson Jenkins of the Chicago Cubs, Bob Gibson of St. Louis or even Tom Seaver, the New York Mets' precocious rookie.

Don Drysdale of the Dodgers, a starter in four All-Star games, also is available.

Because both teams are light on left-handed batters in their starting line-ups, Bauer also is expected to go to a right-handed starter. Prime candidates are Dean Chance, the ex-Angel now pitching for Minnesota, Joe Horlen of the Chicago White Sox, Jim Lonborg of Boston or, perhaps, rookie Jim McGlothlin of the home town Angeles.

The American League is crippled by the loss of star outfielders, Al Kaline of Detroit and Frank Robinson of Baltimore.

Kaline suffered a broken bone in his hand when he hit a bat rack in a fit of anger after striking out. Kaline, the top vote getter with 242, has been replaced in the starting line-up by Tony Oliva of Minnesota. Robinson, bothered by double vision since a June 27 baseline collision, scratched himself from the All-Star game after taking batting practice Friday night. His replacement will be Ken Berry of the White Sox.

Pittsburgh has three men in the National's starting line-up, including the Pirates' dazzling double play combination of Bill Mazeroski at second base and Gene Alley at shortstop. Alley led all the players with 250 of a possible 258 votes.

Roberto Clemente will open in the outfield with Hank Aaron of Atlanta and Lou Brock of St. Louis. It will be up to Alston to place the outfielders by position. The rest of the infield will have Orlando Cepeda of St. Louis at first and Richie Allen of Philadelphia at third. Joe Torre of Atlanta, back in action after missing several games due to injuries, will be the catcher.

Bauer will have one Oriole in his starting lineup. He is Brooks Robinson who will be at third base. Other American League infielders will be Rico Petrocelli of Boston at shortstop, rookie R d Carew of Minnesota at second and Harmon Killebrew of Minnesota at first. Bill Freehan of Detroit is the catcher.

Carl Yastrzemski of Boston joins Oliva and Berry in the American League outfield.

Zoo Keepers Anxious

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — San Antonio Zoo keepers hovered anxiously Saturday over Crip and Rosie, captive whooping cranes, hoping a second egg will hatch and the chick live.

The big whoopers' first little bird died Friday under Rosie's wings.

Fred Stark, zoo director, said the egg could hatch momentarily, almost certainly Monday.

The first chick was hatched Thursday. Stark speculated Rosie either stepped on it or smothered it. It was found dead the next day.

Known whooping cranes number 57, including 12 in captivity. There were only 14 in 1938 when a campaign to preserve the species began.

Sports Scraps

By D. Kelly Scruton

WHILE in Chicago attending the Lions International Convention, their 50th anniversary, we heard a lot of hurray and hurrah about the World Series being played here in Chicago. But, by the end of the week the tune had died down. The Missourians here, however, were able to have their fun by needling the Illinois Lions Club about their earlier predictions, especially the St. Louis group.

There isn't much to say about sports this melancholy weekend as we print my last Sports Scraps on our old letterpress here at 110 West Fourth Street. But as the weeks go by there will be happiness in our new air-conditioned building, where I won't have to perspire while writing my column for the next couple of years, I HOPE.

Sedalia Lions Hang Defeat On Jeff. City

Sedalia's Ban Johnson baseball team won over Jefferson City in a hard fought game Thursday night by a score of 4 to 2. Jefferson City drew first blood in the second inning when Moody reached first base on an error. Before that Crede had flied deep to left field for the first out. After Moody reached first Green flied out to right field and Reed walked. Nieknixon then singled home Moody. Pitcher Steve Beck forced Nieknixon at second for the third out.

The Sedalia Lions roared in the fifth for two runs to go ahead to stay. Gary Eck led off the fifth by striking out. Pitcher Mike Vansell started it off with a triple and Barry Morton walked then stole second. After Tom Hudson struck out for the second out Butch Rzier lined a single to right - center field that scored both Vansell and Morton. Ray Murray grounded out to end the inning.

Jefferson City came back in the sixth for one more run on a single, stolen base another single and a fielders choice.

In the Lions half of the seventh inning Morton struck out, Tom Hudson singled and Butch Rozier doubled with Hudson holding at third. This was the end for Steve Beck who had pitched a no-hitter against the Lions the last time he faced them. Nieknixon came on and Ray Murray to load the bases. John Johnson walked bringing in Tom Hudson. The next play brought "Salty" Schumaker and Don Barbour to the plate for a rhubarb with the umpire. With the count of three balls and no strikes on Larry Bechtel the next call was not sounded until he was about 15 feet down the base line toward first, then the umpire called a strike. The runners on base also thought it was called ball and had started to advance. With the strike called the pitcher threw the ball to first and the tag was put on Johnson and he was called out. After a great deal of arguing the umpire won as always and the game continued. Leon Hall the next batter walked and Butch Rozier came in to score the fourth and final run of the game.

Short Named To Team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chris Short of the Philadelphia Phils was named Saturday by National League Manager Walt Alston to replace Denny Lemaster for Tuesday's All-Star game in Anaheim.

Broadway Realty And S-M Pick Up Team Victories

Broadway Realty romped over the Green Ridge Merchants 13 to 2 and Dennis Boehne scored the winning run in the bottom of the seventh to give S&M a 5 to 4 win over Pepsi Cola in Senior Babe Ruth action Friday night. Little League Tourney to be In Sedalia

Sedalia has been sleected to host the 1967 Little League District Tournament, July 24-27. Last year the district was split into two areas for tournament play. This year the entire district will be rpresented as a whole here in Sedalia.

As host to the tournament, the Sedalia Little League will provide accomodations for any team that wants to spend the night here. Any parents who would be willing to provide accommodations for two fine Little League boys should contact Dean Edwards, 227 Rainbow Drive, TA 7-0490. If we can make this a big success this year, we may be able to host the sectional tournament, which covers several states, in years to come.

The leagues represented will be Whiteman AFB; Carrollton; Harrison County; Lafayette County; Tri County; Clinton; Columbia; Sedalia American and Sedalia National.

The following is a list of Sedalia tournament boys elected by the tournament managers for the Sedalia teams, who were elected by the managers and coaches of the Sedalia Little League teams.

Councilman Is Sure KC Will Have Hockey This Coming Fall

KANSAS CITY (AP) — City Councilman John Maguire said Saturday he was certain now that "Kansas City will have ice hockey in the auditorium this fall."

He made the statement after a conference with a Chicago firm about the installation of a temporary ice rink at the city auditorium for the use of the Kansas City Blues of the Central Hockey League.

The city's efforts to install a permanent ice rink at the arena have been stymied because contractors have failed to submit bids. They have been in negotiation with pipe fitters and plumbers who have been on strike for six weeks.

The city has until noon Monday for negotiations on the installation of a temporary rink.

Censorship Is Lifted

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — The Guidance Ministry has lifted the censorship imposed on Iraq newspapers at the outbreak of the Middle East war June 5, but dailies will continue to be limited to four pages until the crisis is over in order to save hard currency spent on newsprint.

Billie King Wins 3 Titles at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Billie Jean King established herself as the world's No. 1 woman tennis player in sweeping to three titles Saturday in the Wimbledon Championships.

The bouncy, 23-year-old Long Beach, Calif., housewife first crushed Britain's veteran Ann Haydon Jones 6-3, 6-4 for the women's singles title—her second in succesion—and then shared the women's doubles and mixed doubles crowns in a feat last achieve 16 years ago.

The last player to score Wimbledon's rare triple was Doris Hart of the U.S. in 1951.

Billie Jean and 18-year-old Rosemary Casals of San Francisco scored a comeback 9-11, 6-4, 6-2 triumph over defending champions Maria Bueno of Brazil and Nancy Richey of San Angelo, Tex., in women's doubles.

In the final match of a long, exhausting day the bespectacled Californian paired with Australia's Owen Davidson in beating Miss Bueno and Ken Fletcher of Australia 7-5, 6-2 for the mixed doubles crown.

Mrs. King's three finals kept her on the center court for a total of more than 3½ hours—and she was as jaunty at the end as at the beginning.

In the next-to-last game of the mixed doubles she won her service game to love, hitting a clear ace and two fine volleys.

A packed gallery of 17,000 gave the American girl a standing ovation.

In the men's doubles final, South Africans Bob Hewitt and Frew McMillan scored an upset over favored Roy Emerson and Fletcher of Australia 6-2, 6-3, 6-4. John Newcombe of Australia won the men's singles title Friday.

It was Mrs. King's unrelenting net attack that cut down the seasoned, 28-year-old Mrs. Jones, a left-hanter, and it was the Californian's ability to score key points that decided the women's doubles and mixed doubles.

VFW is in first place in the Senior Babe Ruth League with a record of nine wins and no losses. S&M trails by two and one-half games as the league has only four more playing dates. Each team will play a total of twelve games in the schedule.

In individual statistics compiled as of July 9 there were only three players batting .300 or better. Johnny McKenzie of Pepsi Cola leads the league with a .346 mark. George Williams is batting .310 and Dennis Boehne .300. Both Williams and Boehne are members of the S-M team. There have been four home runs hit to date. Dennis Boehne has hit two over the fence. Mike Crowder and Mike Kraxberger have also connected for home runs.

In the pitching department, Alan McCurdy has a perfect five wins and no losses. Ray Murray and Larry Brownfield have 2 and 0 records. Mike Kroenke of S&M has 4 wins and 1 loss record. Mike Kraxberger leads in strikeouts with 60. Alan McCurdy has 55 strikeouts and Jerry Morris has 54.

League play next Monday night will pair Pepsi Cola and S-M in the first game while Green Ridge against Broadway Realty in the second.

Local Swim Team Places Second

Approximately 200 swimmers competed Saturday in the Mid-Missouri Relay Meet at the Walnut Hills Surf Club. The team title went to a powerful Columbia squad with 548 points, while the Surf Club team finished a strong second with a score of 464. Other teams participating and their point scores were Jefferson City with 208 and Marshall with 140.

Points were awarded on a basis of 14 for first place, 10 for second, 8 for third, 6 for fourth, 4 for fifth, and 2 for sixth. Ribbons were presented to first—, second—, and third-place finishers.

The racing program consisted of relay events only in the butterfly, back, breast, and free style strokes and in medley of the four. Competition is divided into boys, and girls' divisions and into age groups.

Blue-ribbon winners for the local team were: in the butterfly, the 10-year-old-and-under girls' and the 13-and-14 girls' teams; in the backstroke, the 10-and-under girls, the 11-and-12 boys, and the 15-and-over boys; in the breaststroke, the 13-and-14 girls; and in the free style, the 10-and-under girls came out on top again to complete a good showing in that grup.

About 75 spectators were on hand, and the Surf Club management would like to thank everyone who helped to make this relay meet a success. The next competition for the Surf Club team will be this next Saturday, July 15, at Indian Foothills Park in Marshall.

White Sox 1, Twins 0

CHICAGO (AP) — Tommy John pitched a brilliant three-hitter and Wayne Causey's ninth-inning sacrifice fly drove in the only run of the game as the Chicago White Sox blanked Minnesota 1-0 Saturday.

John allowed only three singles by Tony Oliva—two of them bloops—and hurled his fifth shutout of the season, raising his record to 8-5. He struck out four and walked three.

Causey's sacrifice fly pushed the winning run across against loser Jim Merritt, who dropped his first game after six victories.

Rookie Dick Kenwort opened the ninth with a double. Jim Stewart ran for Kenworthy and Merritt walked Ken Berry intentionally. Ron Hansen moved the runners along with a sacrifice and then Charlie Bradford was intentionally walked, loading the bases.

Then Causey flied to Ted Uhlaender and Stewart raced home after the catch.

Tigers 2. Red Sox 0

DETROIT (AP) — Denny McLain fired a four-hitter and set up Detroit's first run with a key single as the Detroit Tigers blanked the Boston Red Sox 2-0 Saturday.

It was the sixth straight victory for the second-place Tigers. Boston has dropped four in a row.

The Tigers bunched two of their five hits and pushed across an unearned run off Lee Stange in the third.

Indians 1, Senators 0

CLEVELAND (AP) — Lee Maye drew a bases-loaded, two out walk in the bottom of the 10th inning, forcing home Chico Salmon with the winning run as the Cleveland Indians nipped Washington 4-3 Saturday.

Salmon had walked with one out in the 10th and scooted to third on Joe Azcue's single. After Larry Brown was retired, reliever Casey Cox walked pinch hitter Fred Whitfield intentionally, loading the bases. Then Cox walked Maye and Salmon trotted home with the winning run.

Frank Howard's 22nd home run of the year tied it for the Senators in the eighth.

Tony Horton had given the Indians the lead in the third with a bases-empty homer and Luis tiant protected the margin until Howard connected.

Pirates 6, Reds 1

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Tommie Sisk scattered 10 hits and Willie Stargell keyed two Pittsburgh rallies with doubles as the Pirates whipped Cincinnati 6-1 Saturday.

Stargell's first double launched a two - run Pirate rally in the fourth and his second drove in Gene Alley in the fifth.

Manny Mota stroked three straight hits and Bill Mazeroski delivered a pair of sacrifice flies as Sisk won his seventh game in 13 decisions.

Mazeroski's first sacrifice fly and a two-out single by Donn Clendenon drove in two Pirate runs in the first against Cincinnati starter Gerry Arrigo.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jim Hart drove in five runs on a pair of homers and Juan Marichal became the major leagues' first 12-game winner as San Francisco ripped Los Angeles 8-4 Saturday.

The Dodgers had hopped on Marichal, 12-7, for a quick 4-0 lead on two-run homers by Lou Johnson and Ron Fairly but Hart led the Giants' charge back.

Ollie Brown singled two runs home off Don Drysdale in the third and then Hart smashed a three-run homer and wiped out the Dodger lead in the fifth. Bob Schroder singled and Willie McCovey was hit by a pitch before Hart tagged his first homer.

Tom Haller followed that shot with a bases-empty homer, giving the Giants a 6-4 edge.

In the seventh, Hart connected again. The five RBI gave Hart 21 in the last 10 games. The fifth inning homer was the 100th of his major league career.

Penitentiary Wins Baseball Tournament

WICHITA (AP) — The Lansing Red Sox from the state penitentiary at Lansing defeated Chanute 7-1 Saturday night in the Kansas Championship Baseball Tournament.

The Red Sox were led by pitcher Isaiah "Fireball" Jackson who allowed Chanute two hits, both infielders, and rapped a 3-run homer in the second.

In two earlier games Park City downed Dexter 11-4, scoring nine runs in the third inning to erase a 3-0 deficit.

Pickets Set Up Around Safeway Store In KC

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A Safeway store was picketed today by members of the Congress of Racial Equality, seeking promotion of Negroes to higher job levels in the grocery chain.

The picketed store at 3510 Prospect is one of five stores of the chain which depend heavily on Negro patronage.

Alvin Brooks, C.O.R.E. president, said that none of the 178 meat cutters in the Safeway organization here is a Negro, and that only one of its 146 office employes is a Negro.

The picketing followed a drive by the Council for United Action, which has compelled three baking firms and a bottling firm to increase Negro personnel to 20 per cent at all levels.

Brooks said the picketing of Safeway is not part of the C.U.A. drive.

"The council is going after the producers," Brooks said. "In this case we are beginning to work on the sellers."

McCullough Is Elected

CHICAGO (AP) — Dr. Robert D. McCullough, a Tulsa, Okla., osteopath, was elected Saturday third vice president of Lions International—an office that designates him for the presidency of the service organization in 1970-71.

McCullough is a member of the Oklahoma State Board of Health and a past president of the American Osteopathic Association.

McCullough was opposed by Russell W. Nixon of St. Louis in the contest.

Jim Ryun Sets A New World Record

LOS ANGELES (AP) — America's Jim Ryun shattered the world record for the 1,500-meter run Saturday with a time of 3 minutes 33.1 seconds in the United States-British Commonwealth track and field meet.

The university of Kansas sophomore, already holder of the mile record at 3:51.1, whipped Kenya's Kipchoge Keino by nearly 25 yards as he bettered Australian Herb Elliott's seven-year-old metric mile record of 3:35.6.

After the first lap when Australia's Dave Bailey set the pace with Ryun and Keino running fifth and sixth, the race became a two-man affair.

Keino swung into the lead trying to draw out but Ryun kept right at his heels until he started a sprint with less than a lap to go and finished 2½ seconds better than Elliotts' time in the 1960 Olympics. Statisticians figured the 1,500-meter time the equivalent of a 3:48.5 mile.

Keino finished at 3:37.3 with Alan Simpson of England third in 3:41.7.

Then in order came Bailey, 3:41.7, Jim Grelle of the United States, 3:43.6 and Dave Wilborn, USA, 3:51.2.

Lennox Miller of Jamaica, who attends the University of Southern California, grabbed a first place for the Commonwealth with a 10.1 timing in the 100-meter dash, an event where two Yanks were disqualified for two false starts apiece.

Nebraska's Charlie Greene, the only surviving U. S. representative took second. Both Jimmy Hines and Willie Turner were ruled out of the race.

The United States swept the 110-meter hurdles with Willie Davenport, Richmond Flowers and Earl McCullough finishing 1-2-3 in a blanket finish with the winner timed at 13.6 seconds.

Another United States sweeep came in the shot put with world record holder Randy Matson winning at 67-1½ foll wed by Dave Maggard at 64-1¾ and Neal Steinhauer at 63-11¼.

Women's Amateur Golf Tourney Starts Monday, July 10

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Missouri Women's Amateur Golf Tournament opens Monday at Milburn Country Club for a week of competition.

A field of 185 is scheduled to tee off. The field does not include the defending champion, Mrs. Richard Dalton of St. Louis, and a number of previous winners. Among the absent will be three-time winner Mrs. Edwin MacGee of Indian Hills.

Monday's 18-hole qualifying round will determine the 32-player championship flight, and the lesser flights for 142 other golfers.

Bob McNamara Will Tour Units In War Zone

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara set out Sunday on a tour of American combat units in the field as part of his current survey to determine how many more are needed in South Vietnam.

The Pentagon chief, making his ninth visit here in six years, undertook the on-the-spot field inspection after two days of nonstop briefings and conferences in Saigon with the top U.S. military and civilian officials.

McNamara's field trip itinerary was kept secret for security reasons until after its completion. One of the places he is expected to visit is the northern part of the country in the U.S. Marine sector, where heavy action has been underway for the past week.

The defense secretary is scheduled to make another field tour Monday and remain in Saigon Tuesday for a windup round of conferences. He plans to leave for Washington late Tuesday.

World News Capsules

MOSCOW (AP) — Premiers Alexei N. Kosygin of the Soviet Union and Georges Pompidou of France said in a joint communique Saturday American troops should leave Vietnam and Israeli troops should leave conquered Arab territory.

They called for "gradual development" of relations among all European countries, a nuclear nonproliferation treaty and other steps to reduce atomic stockpiles. France has not signed the partial atomic test ban treaty and has stayed away from United Nations-sponsored disarmament talks in Geneva.

Pompidou completed a five-day visit by conferring separately with Kosygin and Soviet Communist General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev.

BERLIN (AP) — Funeral services for the 79 victims of the fiery train-gasoline truck collision near the East German city of Magdeburg Thursday will be Tuesday, the official East German news agency ADN reported Saturday.

All public buildings have been ordered to fly their flags at half staff that day, the news agency said.

West Berlin newspapers said 40 victims were children. The East Germans reported only that many children were among the dead.

JERUSALEM (AP) — About 100 West German students will help Israel clear away the rubble of last month's war, a German student spokesman announced here Saturday.

Ulrich Kusche, a theology student who has been working to improve relations between Israeli and German students, said the West Germans would help to clear debris from the university campus on Mt. Scopus and to reconstruct playgrounds and sports stadiums.

Twenty-five of the West Germans have arrived in Israel and are touring the country, Kusche said. The rest are to arrive in the next few weeks.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The Chinese Communist Central Committee has complained about slack discipline of laborers and miners, the Czechoslovak news agency CTK reported Saturday from Peking.

The agency said a letter dated last March and addressed to mine and factory workers was recently published by the provincial paper Che-nan Jih Pao. The letter said the workers paid no attention to the quality of products, and left their jobs to participate in activities connected with Chairman Mao Tse-tung's year-long attempt to purge his political enemies.

The newspaper called on the workers to return and meet production quotas.

Cartoonist Will Join KC Star Newspaper Staff

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Star announced today Dan Dowling, widely known New York cartoonist, will join its staff Aug. 15.

Dowling will succeed Bill Sanders, who has been the Star's cartoonist since 1963. He will become editorial cartoonist of the Milwaukee Journal. Before coming here Sanders was with the Greensboro, (N.C.) News.

Dowling, who gre up in the middle West, dire his first political cartoon for the Omaha World Herald in 1938. He served four years in the Army in World War II and after his release from service as a captain joined the New York Herald-Tribune. His cartoons have been nationally syndicated since 1949 when the Herald-Tribune chose him to replace his boyhood idol, the late Jay N. "Ding" Darling.

Dowling, who later went to to the New York World Journal Tribune, won the Sigma Delta Chi "cartoonist of the year" award in 1960.

The Dowlings will move to Kansas City next month from Dobbs Ferry, N.Y. They have a son, Daniel Blair Dowling, Jr., now with the U.S. Navy in Scotland, and a daughter, Blair Dowling, an art student in Florence, Italy.

Israel Outlines Its Strategy

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel outlined plans Friday for administering its war-won Arab territories which suggest it was prepared for lengthy occupation.

In Arab schools, textbooks containing anti-Israeli propaganda will be replaced.

Israeli banks are being encouraged to open branches and offer loans to local residents.

Work on development projects under way at the outbreak of the Middle East war—roads, schools, public building—will continue under Israeli auspices. Israel is prepared to make loans to local authorities.

Farm and marketing experts are studying the possibility of diversifying the agriculture of the occupied territories so that they might mesh with Israel's economy.

An exhibition of products from the west bank of the Jordan River is soon to open in Tel Aviv.

"All kinds of study groups are investigating the economic affairs of these territories and going into long-term policies," reported an Israeli Defense Ministry spokesman.

The slogan is 'business as usual,'" he told newsmen.

"Commanders have been given a general directive to get civilian life back to normal as soon as possible."

Israel has budgeted 2.5 million Israeli pounds—$833,000—for getting administratimn machinery going again in the occupied territories during the month of July.

The final cost is sure to be much bigger," said the spokesman. "Whatever is needed will be supplied. We are doing everything possible to get civilian life back to normal. We are trying to help the Arab people find solutions to their problems."

Hospitals and other medical services were said to be operating normally in the occupied areas. Public transport is running again. Telephone services are being restored and postal services will start next week. Israeli stamps will be used.

Schools are scheduled to open in September, following the summer vacation.

It has been estimated that 2,000 pairs of double-crested cormorants now nest in Maine's Muscongus Bay, compared to four pairs in 1931.

Smithsonian Newest Exhibitions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Everything from an 18th century water wheel and live ducks to a reconstructed house and old whisky bottles is included in the Smithsonian Institution's newest exhibition.

It's called the "Growth of America" and when finished will cover five halls of the Museum of History and Technology. The first two halls, covering two centuries, opened to the public in June.

There's George Washington's uniform, a writing desk on which Thomas Jefferson drafted the Declaration of Independence, Samuel Morse's telegraph and Eli Whitney's cotton gin.

One hall deals with the period 1640 to 1750. The second hall covers the century from 1750 to 1851.

Peter C. Welsh, curator of the project, says it's a new approach for any museum in that the displays cover not one or two phases, but all phases, of an American's life for the century in which he lived.

There's transportation, represented by a bright red and blue Conestoga wagon, an 1831 John Bull locomotive imported from England, and a John Sevens 1804 engine and boiler.

Religion is represented by an enclosed pew from a New England meeting house and finial—or spire-top ornament—from the steeple of Boston's Old North Church.

There are documents, old newspapers, art work, silverware and Benjamin Franklin's wooden printing press.

A frame house from Ipswich, Mass., has been reconstructed in one hall, its sidings moved so the public can see furniture of the 1690s. Another display includes two bedrooms. One is done in frilly 1840 Gothic. The second is the stark, practical bedroom of a Shaker.

"Every phase of life is covered," the curator says, "morning to night."

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON REZONING APPLICATION

Whereas, The Zoning and Planning Commission and the City Council of Sedalia, Missouri have received application from Morris McCown, Doyne McCown, Melvin McCown, Jr., Emogene McCown, Wallace McCown and Shirley McCown, owners requesting changes in Zoning as follows:

1. All that part of the following described real estate, not now zoned M-2, as shown by the zoning map of the City, be rezoned from R-1 to Zone M-1:

Beginning at a point Thirty (30) feet South of the South West corner of Lot number Two (2) in Block number Twelve (12) of Ritchey's Second Addition to the City of Sedalia, Missouri, running thence in a Westerly direction parallel with the North line of Cooper Street, if extended Westerly in the direction it now runs, to the East line of the Right of Way of the Lexington Branch of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, thence in a Northwesterly direction along the East line of said Railroad Right of Way to the North line of Lot number Seven (7) in the Partition of the Estate of Powhattan Wooldridge, deceased, thence East along the North line of said Lot number Seven (7) to a point Fifty Eight (58) feet in a Westerly direction from the West line of Park Avenue, thence South to the North West corner of Lot number One (1) in said Block number Twelve (12) of Ritchey's Second Addition to the City of Sedalia, thence in an Easterly direction to the North East corner of said Lot number One (1) in said Block number Twelve (12), thence South to the South East corner of Lot Number Two (2) in said Block number Twelve (12), thence in a Westerly direction to the South West corner of said Lot number Two (2) in said Block number Twelve (12), thence South to the place of beginning:

Being a part of the South West quarter of Section number Thirty Three (33), in Township number Forty Six (46) North, of Range number Twenty One (21) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in the County of Pettis and State of Missouri.

Beginning at a point where the South line of Cooper Street if extended West in the direction it now runs intersects the East line of the right-of-way of the Lexington and St. Louis Railroad thence East along the South line of Cooper Street to the West line of Park Avenue, thence south along the West line of Park Avenue, One Hundred Twenty-Five (125) feet, thence West parallel with the South line of Cooper Street to the East line of said right-of-way of the Lexington and St. Louis Railroad, thence in a Northwesterly direction along the East line of the right-of-way of the Lexington and St. Louis Railroad to the point of beginning, all the above described land in the County of Pettis and State of Missouri, being part of the S½ of the SW¼ of Section number Thirty-Three (33), Township number Forty Six (46), North of Range number Twenty One (21) West.

3. All that part of the following described real estate now zoned R-3 as shown by the zoning map of the City, be rezoned from Zone R-3 to Zone M-1:

Beginning at a point in the West line of Park Avenue One Hundred Twenty Five (125) feet South of the South line of Cooper Street, if extended Westerly, in the City of Sedalia, Missouri, thence in a Westerly direction parallel with the South line of said Cooper Street, if extended, to the Right of Way of the Lexington Branch of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, thence in a Southeasterly direction along said Right of Way to a line parallel with and One Hundred Eighty Seven and one half (187½) feet South of the South line of said Cooper Street, if extended, thence in an Easterly direction parallel with the South line of said Cooper Street to the West line of said Park Avenue, thence North along the West line of said Park Avenue Sixty Two and one half (62½) feet to the place of beginning; being a part of the South half of the South West quarter of Section number Thirty Three (33), in Township number Forty Six (46) North, of Range number Twenty One (21) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian, in the County of Pettis and State of Missouri.

and that said application be acted upon as provided in Ordinance No. 4479. Therefore, in compliance with Sections No. 89.050 and 89.060 R.S. Missouri, 1959, other applicable statutes, and the said Zoning Ordinance No. 4479; and said Zoning and Planning Commission will meet in the Council Chambers, City Hall Building, Sedalia, Missouri at 7:30 P.M. on Thursday, July 13, 1967 for the purpose of a Public Hearing in relation to said application, to change the zone and rezone said real estate, at which time and place, parties in interest and citizens shall have an opportunity to be heard.

RESOLUTION NO. 524

A RESOLUTION declaring it necessary to bring to the established grade all that part of Quincy Avenue for the purpose of constructing and to construct a concrete curb and gutter on both sides of said Quincy Avenue, from 14th Street to 16th Street, all public streets within the City of Sedalia, Missouri, and providing for special assessment to adjoining property.

BE IT RESOLVED by the Council of the City of Sedalia, Missouri, as follows:

SECTION 1. The Council of the City of Sedalia, Missouri, finds, deems and declares it to be necessary to bring to the tstablished grade all that part of Quincy Avenue, from 14th Street to 16th Street for the purpose of consructing and to construct a concrete curb and gutter on both sides of said Quincy Avenue, from 14th Street to 16th Streets, all public streets within the said City of Sedalia, according to the plans and specifications to be prepared by the City Engineer of said City, and to be on file with the City Clerk of said City on or before the 15th day of August, 1967.

SECTION 2. BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the curbing and guttering herein provided for shall include all curbs and gutters and all returns of said curb and gutter at all intersections of streets and alleys, if any.

SECTION 3. BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the City Engineer of said City of Sedalia shall prepare plans and specifications for said work and improvement together with an estimate of the cost thereof, and shall file the same with the City Clerk of said city of Sedalia on or before the 15th day of August, 1967.

SECTION 4. BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the cost of said improvement shall be paid by special assessment against the lots and lands fronting or abutting on either side of said part of Quincy Avenue, a public street within said city as aforesaid, to be so improved and on said improvements being completed, special tax bills shall be issued against said lots and lands chargeable with the cost of said improvement, and that the cost of bringing said part of said Quincy Avenue to the established grade shall be included in the special assessment for the paying for and bringing of said street to the established grade and curbing and guttering all that part of said Quincy Avenue, in the City of Sedalia in manner and form as hereinbefore set forth.

SECTION 5. BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that this resolution be published for seven (7) consecutive insertions in the Sedalia Democrat-Capital, a daily newspaper of general circulation printed and published in said City of Sedalia, Missouri.

PASSED by the Council of the City of Sedalia, Missouri, on the 3rd day of July, 1967.
(SIGNED)
RALPH H. WALKER,
President of the Council.
APPROVED by the Mayor of said City on this 3rd day of July, 1967.
(SIGNED)
RALPH H. WALKER, Mayor.
ATTEST with the Seal of said City:
RALPH DEDRICK, City Clerk

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals, addressed to the Board of Aldermen, Windsor, Missouri, and endorsed "Proposal for Construction of Sewer Extensions — Part I, City of Windsor, Missouri", will be received at the multipurpose room, Grade School, City of Windsor, until 8:00 P. M., C.D.T. on July 20, 1967, and will then be opened and read, after which the bids will be considered and the contract awarded as soon as practicable.

The proposed improvement project consists of the following:

THE SEDALIA DEMOCRAT

Sedalia, Missouri, Sunday Morning, July 9, 1967 | In Combination With The Sedalia Capital | Second Section

Concerts Honor Gershwin

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In shirtsleeves, sweater or bathrobe, the slender young man trilled and thundered an apartment piano for three weeks.

"Make it good, George," his businessman father urged. "It might be important."

When he finished, George Gershwin had composed a blazing blend of jazz and symphony —"The Rhapsody in Blue"— that rocketed his name into the musical firmament.

Thirteen years later, at 38, after a torrential output of standards ranging from "I Got Rhythm" to "It Ain't Necessarily So," George Gershwin died.

He died July 11, 1937, in a Hollywood hospital a few hours after surgery for a brain tumor. The anniversary will itself have no sad commemorations. But there will be the usual 40-plus U.S. and European all-Gershwin memorial summer concerts, mostly in July, including one in Hollywood Bowl.

In the perspective of three decades, what is the musical stature of the onetime Tin Pan Alley song plugger, a son of Russian-Jewish immigrants?

"Controversial in this country, solid in Europe," says Ira Gershwin, now 70, George's brother and lyricist on many unforgettable hits such as 'Embraceable You," "Fascinatin' Rhythm" and "Nice Work If You Can Get It."

Sitting in his beautiful Beverly Hills home, looking like a plump Buddha or banker, a cigar in the middle of his mouth, Ira added: "In Europe, 'Porgy and Bess' is considered a great opera. In this country a few critics still say it isn't Bach or Beethoven.

But more and more, George becomes respected. Louis Untermeyer wrote a book two years ago about the 100 greatest people of the 20th century. He included four composers, and George was one of them."

Paul Whiteman, the onetime "King of Jazz," for whom Gershwin wrote "Rhapsody in Blue," said at his home in New Hope, Pa.: 'I don't want—by any means—to take anything away from the many fine symphonic compoers we have had, but Gershwin was the finest.

"He was the first to take the jazz feeling and combine it in symphonic form and still respect the symphony. He has had a bigger impact on symphonic music across the world than almost any modern composer."

eesfeesf

Ferde Grofe picked up Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" pages as he wrote them, orchestrated them for Whiteman's 18 men and played second piano to Gershwin's first at that premier performance in New York in 1924.

The portly, 75-year-old composer—his "Grand Canyn Suite" is played throughout the world—said at his Santa Monica, Calif., home: "Gershwin carved out a niche for himself that nobody else has matched. He couldn't write anything that didn't have a great tune. 'Rhapsody in Blue' is a blend of beautiful melody and syncopation. I believe it will live through the ages."

The grea popular song writer Irving Berlin—"Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Always," "White Christmas," "Remember," 'God Bless America'—said in New York: "The best, truest thing anyone can say of Gershwin's work, after the passage of 30 years, is that it is fresher and more popular than when he was alive."

Song writer Hoagy Carmichael—"Stardust"— remembers him as a dear friend, ennis partner who was "just as thorough about trying to win as he was about writing fine music," and generous musical advice-giver.

Gershwin, who never married, was born Sept. 28, 1898, in Brooklyn, the second son of Morris and Rose Gershvin—originally Gershowitz. They named him Jacob but called him George. The family changed the spelling to Gershwin after George did upon starting his musical career.

Brother Ira recalls their boyhood on Manhattan's Lower East Side: "Our father went from one business to another: cigar store, pool parlor, Turkish bath, restaurants. At the end he went broke. He liked the opera and could hum a few arias."

In school the violin playing of a fellow student aroused George's interest in music. He studied piano diligently. At 14 he could transpose any tune into any key and at 15 he was hired by J.H. Remick & Co., a music publishing firm, as a song plugger, demonstrating new tunes for vaudeville acts. He also began writing popular songs. The first, published, in 1916: "When You Want 'Em, You Can't Get 'Em."

"A lot of people think George was brash, but he wasn't," said Ira. "The main thing about him was his vitality. He was always working."

George's first entire musical comedy score was "La, La, Lucille" in 1919. Soon he wrote the hit "Swanee," sung by Al Jolson in the musical "Sinbad."

In the '20s and '30s Ira wrote the lyrics to George's melodies for some of Broadway's biggest musical hits. A partial list:

"Lady, Be Good," including the song "The Man I Love"; "Oh, Kay!" "Someone to Watch Over Me"; Funny Face" "S' wonderful"; "Girl Crazy" "But Not for Me," "Bidin' My Time," "Strike Up the Band": "Of Thee I Sing" "Love is Sweeping he Country," "Wintergreen for President".

He also collaborated on the lyrics with DuBoise Heyward, who wrote the libretto for George's folk opera "Porgy and Bess," including "It Ain't Necessarily So," "I Got Plenty of Nuthin'," and "'Summertime'.

Ira won a Pulitzer Prize, the first to a lyricist, for "Of Thee I Sing" in 1932. Why didn't George?

"Because at that time they didn't give the Pulitzer to music, only to words,"" Ira said.

'Password' To Disappear In September

EDITOR'S NOTE — Unless there is a last-minute change of plans, CBS's long-playing word-game, "Password," will disappear in September from the day-time schedule, replaced by a new soap opera. Allen Ludden, the literate host who moved over from "College Bowl" and gave the show its identity for six years, describes here what it feels like when one learns that a show — and one's job — is marked for extinction.

NEW YORK (AP) — How does it feel to leave a show you've done five days a week for six years? I'm sad to leave "Password." It's a great game. It's an original. I can honestly ay that I have never once been bored playing it. Each day is a fresh challenge.

The men who produced it are thorough professionals and they've taught me a lot. And, of course, it was great fun to be part of an instant hit. Within four weeks of its start, "Password" became the most popular show in its time period. Not only that, the sets in use at the time it was shown increased, proving that people who had never even had their sets on at that time turned them on just to watch our show. That has to make you feel good.

So — how does it feel? Strange! I think a lot of people will join me in missing it. But that is the buisness I find myself in these days. The ratings have dictated the demise of the show and now I've got to look ahead. Certainly things look different than they did six years ago. When "Password" started, time job as a performer that I I was so tentative about a full-time job as a performer that I asked for a six months leave from my CBS executive job. I'd been working weekends on "College Bowl," but it had been many years since I had on-camera work as a full-time occupation. Six months later I was hooked. I still am.

I like working in front of the camera. And I like working with day-time television audiences. I have no idea whether my next show will be a game show. But I'll make book that it will be a day-time show with some kind of audience participation. There is no more challenging job as far as I am concerned. I believe that the eye-to-eye day-time shows can and do raise the level of television programming.

How? Through a simple but logical process. The better of the day-time games and talk shows actually educate the audience. The viewer is asked to participate, to think, to question and the result is that the viewer learns. The over-all sophisitication of the viewer is increased. And the only thing that will improve television programming is the increase in viewer sophisitication, viewer discrimination. When the audience asks more of its programs, it will get more. Since day-time programming involves them in good games or interesting conversation, that's for me.

LONDON (AP) — Britain may become more dependent on the United States for planes to carry her nuclear weapons in the 1970s following France's abandonment of a $1-billion warplane construction deal with the British.

The French said Wednesday night that for "purely financial" reasons, they had pulled out of a joint project to develop a 17-ton, twin-jet, swing-wing plane that would have served both as an interceptor and a fighter-bomber.

British Defense Secretary Denis Healey told Parliament Britain was exploring possibilities of partnership with other European nations and the feasibility of going ahead alone. But the British might decide to buy a new generation of American planes after the F111s now on order for the Royal Air Force are phased out.

LONDON (AP) — A few minutes before the Tower of London's new jewel house was opened to the public today, the burglar alarm of the bomb-proof repository for the crown jewels went off in Scotland Yard.

Five police cas rushed to the tower. A police boat chugged out to seal off the nearby Thames River area.

To Celebrate Their First Anniversary

WASHINGTON (AP) — The girl married the Supreme Court justice. In short order, he was dropped from the Social Register, a congressman demanded an investigation, fellow justices heaved private moans, and wags had a field day.

That was one year ago.

On July 15, blue-eyed, blonde Cathleen Curran Heffernan, 24, and Supreme Court Justice William Orville Douglas, 68, celebrate their first wedding anniversary.

It has been a year of trips, speeches, pressure, social ostracism, unexpected kindnesses, exhaustion and a new heartbreak and happiness—a year quite like most first years of marriage, yet totally different.

She was a bouncy tomboy working her way through college, he darling of three brothers a typical Oregon youngster. Then she met Douglas.

Douglas is a loner, a nonconformist; he was one of the youngest men ever appointed to the Supreme Court. He is 44 years older than Cathy and three times divorced.

Bill Douglas is used to the public spotlight, and in fact, enjoys it. To his bride—from the evening newsmen crashed the bridal reception—it's been all new, both pleasure and anguish.

The young Mrs. Douglas has had experiences to make any wife wince—narrowly missing one of her husband's former wives at a party, being stared at in the family pew at the Supreme Court, a much publicized reported harassing by actress Joan Crawford at a White House dinner, anonymous phone calls and ugly letters.

Men think she's pretty. Women think she's brave.

"She has something," says a law clerk at the Supreme Court. "She's someone you want to protect, to make happy. I've talked to her several times, and I'm still entranced. I don't quite know why."

When she's in a large crowd, Cathy stays close to her husband. He keeps his left arm around her shoulder. She shakes hands limply and seems shy at first meeting.

Privately, she sparkles. She has a ready wit—curtailed some now that she's seen herself in print—a quick smile, and a natural affection for children and other persons.

Cathy is 5 feet 2, weighs about 120 pounds, and has the relaxed, easy gait of an outdoors woman. she has given up smoking—her wedding gift from her husband was an ashtray—enrolled in a correspondence course at he University of Michigan, and taken a stab at learning French.

She and her husband have entertained friends at the kind of party they both enjoy most, an informal backyard barbeque. One such gathering was held for Cathy's 24th birthday, April 30. Guests included three Supreme Court justices, an ambassador and their wives.

Cathy says she scolds her husband occasionally. She tells friends she has a temper. The age difference doesn't bother her, she says, but the justice's former marriages sometimes do. She figures that's normal.

Can this winter-spring union last?

Before the Douglases left for their summer home in Goose Prairie, Wash., Cathy went by her husband's office, and those who saw her said she was "very, very, very happy. And in love."

To paraphrase a Washington society matron, "Solomon had 14,000 wives, and he was the wisest judge we ever had."

Houstonia Woman's Club Holds Meeting

Guests were Mrs. Everett Vannoy, Hughesville; Diane Blackburn, Grand Island, Neb.; and Cindy and Angie Wicker.

The meeting opened with the pledge to the flag, club collect and club song. Mrs. C. F. Wicker gave the devotional. At the business meeting it was voted to have a booth at the sidewalk bazaar in Sedalia.

The community betterment picnic was announced for July 17 at Howard Park

Mrs. Charles Wicker gave an article from the GFWC Club Woman on whether the voting age should be lowered. Mrs. James Houchen, chairman on health, introduced Mrs. Vannoy, who spoke and showed slides of the Childrens Therapy Center in Sedalia.

Miss Carroll Sue Neal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Neal. Jefferson City, and Mr. Michael Phelen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Phelen, California, were united in marriage at ten o'clock Saturday morning, June 17 at the First Church of God in Jefferson City.

The Rev. Carl Peterson officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Miss Levonne Peterson, Jefferson City, was organist and accompanied Miss Anise Fuller, also of Jefferson City, who sang, "O Perfect Love" and "Walk With Faith In Your Heart".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a simple, A-line natural waist sheath of rayon satin brocade. The gown was fashioned with a softly scooped neckline and sleeveless bodice. The over jacket, made of white whisper chiffon, with a high neckline, was accented by peasant styled long sleeves and two tiny bows in the back. The gown was further enhanced by a chapel train, made of the same fabric, which fastened at the waist and flowed to the floor into a semi-circle. Her only jewelry was a necklace, a simple designed gold cross, belonging to the bride's mother. Her mid-length bouffant veil was of imported, hand rolled silk illusion. It was secured by a Dior Style wide double bow of lustered bridal satin. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and white carnations, with white satin streamers.

The maid of honor was Miss Carol Clutter, California. She was attired in a floor length gown of maize crepe peau, and lined with whisper weight taffeta. The bodice featured a softly scooped neckline and full peasant styled long sleeves of chiffon. A band of satin encircled the high waist. A cuff of the satin also trimmed the sleeves at the wrists. A wide watteau panel of chiffon fastened at the neckline with a wide double bow of the satin. Her matching headpiece was a double bow of chiffon. The bow was trimmed with loops of tiny pearl beads and centered with a pearl teardrop. A shoulder circular veil of nylon maline completed the outfit. She carried a colonial bouquet of red roses encircled with white carnations and white satin streamers.

Mrs. David Scott, California, and Miss Cheryl Neal, Jefferson City, twin sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids. The were attired identically to the maid of honor in an early summer shade of blue.

Miss Anita Marie Neal, sister of the bride, served as flower girl. She wore a light blue dotted swiss street length sleeveless dress. The matching coat was fashioned with three-quarter length sleeves and a blue tie chiffon bow at the neck. She carried a white basket with blue ribbon streamers, containing red rose petals.

The bridegroom chose Mr. David Stepp as best man. Mr. Leroy Brown and Mr. Wayne Barry served as groomsmen. Ushering duties were performed by Mr. Harold Welhelm and Mr. Jerry Albin, Boonville.

The mother of the bride chose a rose pink eyelet sheath dress with white accessories for her daughter's wedding. The groom's mother selected a mint green embroidered dress with matching jacket and accessories. Each mother wore a corsage of pink carnations.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church dining room. Miss Pamela Brock, Jefferson City, presided at the guest book. Mrs. David Phelen, sister-in-law of the groom, was at the gift table. Assisting generally were Miss Roseland Champlain, Miss Sandra Morgan and Miss Betty Hoback, all of Jefferson City.

The bride attended senior high in Jefferson City and the groom is a 1963 graduate of the California High School and attended school in Illinois. He is employed with the Trihurst Construction Company in Ashland.

Following a short wedding trip, the couple will reside in California.

Policy On Weddings Publication

Elections To Be Held

Must Prevent Overthrow If He Becomes President

SAIGON (AP) — On Nov. 1, 1963, a young South Vietnamese army colonel named Nguyen Van Thieu ordered his division's tanks to attack and take the presidential palace in Saigon.

Three years and eight months later Thieu, now a three-star general and chief of state, is trying to get into the palace by means of the Sept. 3 presidential election.

Thieu's tanks took part in the overthrow of the Ngo Dinh Diem regime in 1963. If he is elected president, Thieu will have to use his political wisdom to prevent the same thing from happening to him.

Thieu, now 44, heads a ticket with Premier Nguyen Cao Ky as vice president, a ticket not foreseen even one day before it was formed by the Armed Forces Council.

The behind-the-scene maneuvering that went into making Thieu the No. 1 man among the generals is typical of the way Thieu operates.

A pipe-smoking, tea-drinking man, Thieu lives with his wife and three children and his elderly parents in a duplex apartment in the Joint General Staff compound near Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airport.

He seems to enjoy public appearances, mans of them with his wife, and mingles easily with crowds, cracking pleasant jokes and smiling frequently. He favors conservative business suits but wears his uniforms on military occasions.

Thieu's rise to prominence has been steady and gives all signs of being well planned.

Born in Ninh Thuan, at the juncture of central and southern Vietam, Thieu attended a Roman Catholic secondary school in Hue, the ancient walled imperial capital. Thieu was converted to Catholicism before he married.

He entered the army in 1946 and was graduated as a warrant officer from the French-run National Military Academy in Hue.

During the French-Vietnam war, Thieu fought with Vietnamese forces under French command. After the French left he was deputy commander of military region and of the 21st Division.

From 1955 to 1959, Thieu was commandant of the Dalat military academy.

He commanded the 1st Division in the northernmost two provinces under the Diem regime but at the time of Diem's overthrow led the 5th Division. This division, located just north of Saigon, was a principal agent in Diem's downfall.

There had been a shortage of generals under Diem, and Thieu, then a colonel, became one of the first promoted by the military juanta that took over.

By this time Thieu had begun to gain a reputation as a soldier's soldier, a man looked up to for his opinions. To this day he remains one of the few South Vietnamese generals virtually free of rumors hinting at graft or other corruption.

In January, 1964, Thieu was one of several generals who helped Maj. Gen. Nguyen Khanh oust Maj. Gen. Duong Van Minh. "Big Minh" had led the military junta during the months after Diem fell.

Thieu became chief of staff of the Joint General Staff—a sort of secretary to the ruling general.

Later in 1964 Thieu drifted away from Khanh to become more closely associated with a group of junior generals later called the "young Turks."

Thieu was older than the "young Turks," and probably never really one of them. He became, in effect, a respected elder to whom they looked for advice.

The "young Turks" then included such officers as Nguyen Cao Ky, commander of the air force, Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi and Gen. Nguyen Huu Co.

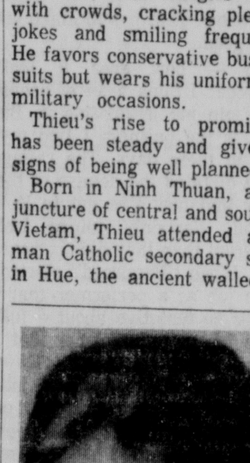
Through most of 1964 and early 1965, Khanh's rule went through one political crisis after another. Thieu, then back in an army command in the Mekong Delta, was called into Khanh's government during one crisis and became second deputy premier in January 1965.

As the crises continued and one after another of Khanh's premiers were forced out, the "young Turks" consolidated their power over Khanh and formed an Armed Forces Council to rule. Thieu became deputy prime minister and later armed forces minister.

In February, 1965, Khanh was pressured out of the Armed Forces Council. There followed a short period of civilian rule but in June, 1965, after a series of public disorders, the "young Turks" formed the National Leadership Council and took over the government.

The generals named Thieu chief of state and chairman of the National Leadership Committee, and Thieu appointed Ky premier.

At this point Thieu was clearly in the most powerful position in South Vietnam. But he was to lose this position to Ky over the next two years and did not regain it until Ky was persuaded to resign from the presidential race 10 days ago.



ENGAGED — Mrs. Velma Welch, Warsaw, announces the engagement of her daughter, Pamela Lee, to Mr. William Steve Chance, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Chance, Warsaw. Miss Welch is the daughter of the late Mr. Jerry H. Welch. She is a senior at L.H.S. and Mr. Chance is a 1966 graduate of L.H.S. and is presently attending Central Missouri State College, Warrensburg.

BETROTHED — Mr. and Mrs. Harold R. Gordon, 38 Bomarc, announce the engagement of their daughter, Cynthia Ann, to Mr. Donald R. Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Patton Jones, Mt. Vernon, Ill. Plans are being arranged for the wedding to take place in the L.D.S. Temple, Salt Lake City, Utah.

TO MARRY — Mr. J. A. Gresham, 506 North Prospect, and Mrs. Zella Gresham, 1508 South Harrison, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter Linda Marie, to A2c Harry James Lockhart, son of Mrs. Freida Lockhart, Davy, W. Va. Miss Gresham is a 1967 graduate of Smith - Cotton High School. Airman Lockhart is serving in the U.S. Air Force stationed at Goose Bay, Labrador. The wedding is being planned for late December.

Desalting Solves Problems

EDITOR'S NOTE — As the resources to feed the world's billions constantly diminishes, man turns increasingly to the sea for tomorrow's substenance. Enough food can be harvested from the bountiful sea to feed current populations and millions more, and bring fresh water to the parched areas of the globe. Here are two stories which spotlight activities to harness the sea for man's benefit.

By BEN FUNK

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — In the third month of a searing drought, old Key West faced a crisis. Water reserves were dangerously low and 56,000 residents were on severe rations. The city was tense, because a fire could mean catastrophe.

Then from the sea that surrounds it, millions of gallons of purest water gushed into the city's mains. Suddenly long years of shortages brought by drought and hurricane were gone forever.

Thirsty Key West had turned to the sea, mightiest of reservoirs, to solve a problem that has plagued peoples of many lands through all of recorded history.

The biggest single-unit sea water desalting plant in the world had just gone into operation. It sucks up five to six million gallons of briny fluid a day and sends it coursing in a boiling flood through a maze of super-heated pipes and chambers.

Then, out one end, pours 2,620,000 gallons of water so pure it must be cascaded over a bed of lime to give it body and taste. From the other end, mineral-laden residue flows back to the sea.

The plant is the biggest so far put in use as the world looks to the seas to meet staggering demands of the future for fresh water.

But it is only a small sample of what is to come. Last May 19, President Johnson signed a bill authorizing a $444-million nuclear-powered plant off the Southern California coast. It will produce 150 million gallons of fresh water a day for that arid region, while generating 1.8 million kilowatts of power.

This huge installation, the President said, "will not suddenly make the deserts bloom. But more than anything we have yet done, it points to the day when lands now dry and empty will sustain life and feed the people of the world."

Water covers seven-tenths of the earth, but civilizations have fallen for lack of it. Wars have been fought over it. Even now millions of people cannot get enough that is fit to drink.

Lack of rainfall cannot be blamed entirely for this strange paradox. In many regions richly endowed with water, man has so recklessly polluted his precious rivers and lakes their foul contents are useless to him.

Key West, sitting astride a coral island at the end of the chain of Florida Keys, has no fresh water streams. From the time it was a haven for pirates of the Spanish Main until 1941 it relied on rainwater caught in cisterns.

Then the U.S. Navy built a 130-mile pipeline to carry six million gallons of water a day from the mainland to its Key West base. It needed only half of the flow. The rest was sold to the domestic population and for years this satisfied all requirements.

Occasionally, a hurricane slashing through the Keys broke the line, cutting off the water for days at a time, and Key Westers went on rations. Then, as the population grew and the Navy base was enlarged after the Cuban crisis of 1962, there wasn't enough water to go around.

In the search for relief, the Florida Keys Aqueduct Commission found that a second pipeline would cost $40 million, a conversion plant only $3,370,000. It became the first community in the United States to fill its needs by desalting sea water.

The plant poured out its first fresh water April 21, at the height of the worst drought in a quarter of a century.

Three hundred years before the birth of Christ, the Greeks were trying to find a way to make sea water usable. But not until 1952, when the Office of Saline Water — OSW — was established in the U.S. Department of Interior, was the problem attacked on a broad front

Westinghouse Electric Corp. had begun purifying brackish water for electric power plants in the early 1930s and its evaporators were in common use by utilities and industrial plants.

In 1948, Westinghouse began research that was to lead to construction of what was claimed to be the first large-scale plant for distilling ocean water. It was in the oil-rich but water-proof Shiekdom of Kuwait on the Persian Gulf.

QUICK RETURN to the United States is possible for wounded troops in Vietnam, without even leaving their beds in the buslike ambulance. The entire ambulance is backed into Air Force C-141 StarLifters after the giant cargo planes have disgorged supplies flown over from the States. The procedure allows the military to fly cargo and troops from America to Southeast Asia in less than a day's time, and rush wounded to modern hospitals on the east and west coasts in a similar amount of time on the return trip.

Today the company has plants in operation around the world producing more than 28 million gallons a day for communities and industries. It is being challenged in this exciting field by several other U.S. firms.

World production now is 50 million gallons a day and is expected to rise to more than two billion gallons a day — or nine trillion gallons a year — by 1975.

Water use has expanded so tremendously that even the United States views its future supplies with anxiety. In 1900, Americans used 40 billion gallons a day. Today, the figure is 350 billion gallons.

By 1980, the Interior Department says, the need will be 600 billion gallons, 85 billion more than is currently available.

Because of these immense demands several areas of the nation are faced with a choice of finding new supplies or restricting population growth and economic development.

The OSW shares its technology with other nations and interest has deen so great that when an international conference on water was held this year in Washington 98 countries sent representatives.

Numerous desalting plants are in operation in Africa, some in Asia, the Caribbean and Latin America, and a few in Europe.

Until the Key West plant was built, the two largest single units were on the island of Curacao in the Caribbean, each pouring out 1.4 million gallons of fresh water daily.

Kuwait now has several units producing a total of 7.3 million gallons a day.

Others with capacities of a million gallons or more are operating at Qatar on the Persian Gulf, in the Bahamas and Italy.

The Soviet Union has a 1.5 million gallon facility at Shevchenk on the arid eastern shore of the Caspian Sea and is planning other larger ones. Tunisia, whose four million people are in desperate need of water, is going after it in the sea. So are Saudi Arabia, Cyprus, Hong Kong, the Canary Islands, Malta, Sicily and Spain. Israel and Egypt are studying plans for desalting plants.

There can be far greater application of the new purifying techniques than just desalting water. They can be used on contaminated river water, swamp water, or water poisoned by mine acids.

If, as forecast, daily fresh water production reaches nine trillion gallons in 1975, that much water would yield $250 million in salt, $230 million in potash, $43 million in magnesia, $29 milllion in bromine, $29 million in boron, and $10 million in other minerals, including $510,000 in gold.

When Mexico and the United States agreed in 1965 to examine together the feasibility of a giant plant on the Gulf of California to meet needs of both countries in that area, President Johnson said:

"The earth's water belongs to all mankind. Together, we must find ways to make certain that every nation has it in full share, and that there is really enough of it for all nations."

ABOARD THE DEEPSTAR 4,000 (AP) — Oozing over a filmy, furrowed sea bottom 1,000 feet deep in a Gulf of Mexico canyon, the egg-shaped submarine slid down the side of a steep pit.

"We have found an enormous hole, six to eight feet deep and eight to ten feet across," submarine pilot Ronald Church calmly reports into a tape recorder microphone. "It's almost incredible — certainly caused by some type of current action."

Church put the sumbarine's twin propeller motors in reverse. The vessel backed out of the pit as smooth as silk, then headed another direction to continue its scientific search amid grotesque, yet beautiful, marine life found only at great depths.

It's a typical day aboard the Deepstar 4,000, the first in a family of free-swimming submersibles built by Westinghouse Electric Corp.'s Underseas Division. The three-man submarine gets its name from the fact that it can work at depths up to 4,000 feet.

The submersible, built to withstand 2,000 pounds of pressure per square inch, is one of only a few deep-diving scientific vessels now in existence.

The men who pilot these submarines know they are only beginning to uncover the vast scientific knowledge waiting to be found deep in the world's oceans.

"Everytime we go down there we see something new," said Robert Bradley, another Deepstar pilot.

On this particular day Deepstar's goal was the abyss of the DeSoto Undersea Canyon 1,000 feet below the Gulf of Mexico surface about 70 miles southwest of Pananama City, Fla. It was a 20-minute plunge.

Using bottom-sounding instruments as a guide, the pilot releases a hunk of lead 160 feet above the sea floor — making Deepstar 4,000 about 50 pounds lighter and almost buoyant. The ship levels off, then settles slowly to the ocean bottom.

Two battery-powered propellers push the submarine along the rugged floor. Headlights illuminate the sea bottom, which normally at that depth is almost pitch dark.

The Gulf of Mexico floor is a barren desert, looking much like the pocked surface of the moon as seen in pictures taken by lunar-landing spacecraft.

Marine life had adapted to this desolate existence. The most common fish have narrow eel-like bodies that need little food to support. Their heads are large so when food does swim by, they rarely miss snatching it in their big mouths.

"There are twice as many fish in deep waters of the gulf than there are in the Pacific," observed Church, who piloted many lengthy dives in both places. "But the Pacific is more prolific with marine life near the surface, probably because the gulf gets sediment and silt" from rivers and communities encircling it.

Deepstar pilots said they spotted giant broadbill swordfish on previous dives in the same area and speculated that this information "could lead to a new swordfish fishery" on Florida's West Coast.

Deepstar 4,000-like many scientific submersibles — is equipped with a mechanical arm and flower-petal-shaped hand that can snatch starfish, shellfish or other specimens from the sea floor and drop them into an extendable basket outside the submarine.

Church said information is freely swapped among ocean scientists around the nation.

"Once you dive down there," one Deepstar technican obtance from one type of fish, and different varieties live at different depths."

"The biggest restriction today is that the industry is young and the cost of operating these submersibles high," D.K. Ela, Deepstar program manager for Westinghouse, said in an interview.

"But the potential is enorserved, "you fall in love with the sea. It's exciting. It's beautiful. It's like a woman you never want to leave."

"I'm basically a biologist," added Church. 'Deep-diving is one thing most biologists don't get. I can observe behavior of fish never before known. There's one species, for example, which marine scientists previously thought sat upright on the ocean bottom. I went down there and discovered it squashes out on the bottom like a pancake."

Church, an expert photographer, started in the diving business 15 years ago as a scientific diver with Scripps Institution of Oceanography at the University of California. When he is off at sea, his wife stays at their San Diego, Calif., home near where Westinghouse's Underseas Division builds and tests its submersibles.

"You never see the same situation twice," Church explained.

"There is a distinct difference in marine life everywhere you dive. A different variety will live at a spot just a short dismous for geological, archeological and biological studies. Submersibles can investigate the bottom structure and the water between the bottom and the surface," Ela noted.

"And if we're ever going to exploit resources in the ocean-oil, fish harvests, minerals—then the ocean bottom has to be surveyed," he said.

4-H Club Notes

Plans for Achievement Day were made by the Lamine Go-Getters at the meeting held June 13 at the Lamine Community Center.

The meeting was called to order by Nova Turner, president, and pledges were led by Marvin Turner. It was decide that when projects were completed the club would have a skating party.

Pam Fortune gave a talk on good hair grooming, and Marvin Turner gave a demonstration on gardening.

Songs were sung after which refreshments were served to 17 members present.

An outdoorsman meeting and gardening meeting also were held.

Wood Family Holds Reunion

Attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Claud Wood, Marshfield, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Wood Eminence, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Pollard Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Wood, Marsha and Donna; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Wood and two children, Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. John Houston, Herbie, Bryan, Cinthia and Tracy; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ziegelbein, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Strine, and Mrs. Charles Stillfield, David, Ann and Wray Dean; Mr. and Mrs. William Moon, Mr. and Mrs. Les Webb and two sons; Mrs. Alma Potter, all of Sedalia.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wirth, Dennis and Delbert, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Wood and Phil, Miss Ann Smith, of Independence; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wisemann, Mr. and Mrs. John Wood and Debora, Harrisonville; Mr. and Mrs. Bob Benwear, Oretta, Bernie, Ricky and Bradd, Pleasant Hill; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Embry and Mark and Mrs. Tillie Hall, Tipton.

It was decided to have the reunion again next year the first Sunday in June at the park.

Presents Two Possibilities On Numbers

SAIGON (AP) — The staggering casualties the allies claim to have inflicted on the Communists—43,000 by body count so far this year and 200,000 since the war began—can only lead to two conclusions, knowledgeable sources say.

One answer, they believe, is that American and allied units sometimes inflated the number of Communists troops killed and counted in the battlefield.

The other answer is that the Communist insurgency is so virulent and is growing so rapidly that far more than a 100,000 additional allied troops will be needed to contain the Communists, let alone defeat them.

A large number of high-level sources believe both answers are correct to varying degrees.

The Viet Cong were reckoned to have 5,000 full and part-time fighters in 1960. The Viet Cong now are believed to count 230,000 fighting men, aided by 60,000 North Vietnamese regulars.

The 200,000 dead claimed in American and Vietnamese official statistics represents fewer than half of what normally could be expected to be the real casualties, senior U.S. officers have said. This is because they believe that for every body counted at least one more has been missed or carried from the battlefield by his comrades.

Past battle experience shows that from three to five men are wounded for each dead. And the Communists have lost some 65,000 by desertion, according to official figures.

Lumping all these figures, the Communist casualties could total about two million. This does not count those killed unseen by artillery and U.S. bombers hitting in North and South Vietnam and Laos.

Although the 200,000 body count figure is called accurate officially, senior U.S. officers here and in the Pentagon have privately voiced doubts. One three-star general here said he always cuts body-count totals by a half or more. A Pentagon socrce said body count had been exaggerated in the past but now is based on "pretty accurate guesses."

An American battalion commander laughingly berated a colleague for the claims made on behalf of his unit and then confessed that such things were often necessary.

This is true for two reasons, sources in a position to know report. One is pressure for victories that will show things are going well in Vietnam. The second is a desire of unit commanders at all levels to show that their men are outperforming other units.

In some cases verified by reporters, the body count was boosted as the report went out by radio from company to battalion to brigade and division.

Nasser's Last Public Appearance Was June 9

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

President Gamal Abdel Nasser's silence since the end of the Arab-Israeli war speaks louder than his accustomed resounding oratory.

Not since the night of June 9 when he offered to resign — an offer rejected by his rubber-stamp National Assembly — has the Egyptian president had anything to say publicly. This reticence strengthens an impression that the man who sought to be the leader of all Arabs is not yet out of danger from the repercussions of Arab defeat and humiliation.

The silence can create a void in Egypt, an atmosphere for whispered rumors and gradually increasing resentment as Egyptians react to the delayed wallop of their losses.

Nobody has told the Egyptians where they go from here. Nobody in high office, not even their idolized Nasser, has come forward to tell them how to bind up the wounds, how to restore their self-respect, how to seek new confidence.

What they have learned, gradually, is that the war cost them dearly, not only in killed and wounded and not only in the loss of their Soviet arms and equipment, but in the severe shock to an economy which already was rocky. The Egyptians are learning that there is even more belt tightening in store for them.

Nasser has a new government in which he is both president and premier. Thus he assumes personally all the responsibility for measures which must be undertaken. Agencies of this new government have been cutting costs to the bone. Tens of thousands of workers employed by the government, to say nothing of those in the armed forces, will be directly affected.

Nasser's silence has fascinated some who have considered themselves his friends, for example, the Yugoslav Communists. A dispatch from Cairo to the Communist party newspaper Borba in Belgrade has come up with some intriguing lines of speculation.

The dispatch noted that military uniforms have disappeared gradually from Cairo's streets. It said that army officers travel in civilian clothes to their posts and, after work, change from uniforms for the trip home.

"A number of cases have been known of spontaneous popular indignation against this group, which openly enjoyed numerous privileges in society because of its particularly important role and responsibility, which, however it failed to fulfill," the dispatch went on.

It described officers gathering once again at their swank officer's club and noted that "passers-by do not refrain from frequently spiteful comments and remarks betraying ill feeling."

In short, the professional soldier who was the hero of all a month ago is getting unpopular.

Nasser's acceptance of Soviet terms for new arms and equipment to replace what he lost can prove dangerous to him since a large conservative element among his followers balks at any further expansion of Communist influence in Egypt. The Russians this time are insisting that Nasser agree to a heavy influx of Soviet advisers and technicians to make sure that Moscow's investment does not go down the drain again.

Nasser obviously had adopted caution as his watchword as he weighs the cumulative impact on his people and all Arabs of the Egyptian military and diplomatic disasters. It is notable that influential voices now are being raised in Cairo for a more realistic look at Israel. One of the most knowledgeable journalists in Egypt wrote that the notion of destroying Israel as a nation was a basic mistake which contributed heavily to Egypt's calamity.

Nasser is receiving new arms, but Egypt and the Arabs are going to be weak for a long time. The weakness will be aggravated by economic difficulties among a hungry population growing at such a rate that even the prized Aswan Dam being built by the Russians cannot reclaim enough land to keep food production ahead of population increase.

There are bleak days ahead for Egypt. And the bleaker the outlook, the more difficult and dangerous Nasser's position can become.

Parliamentarians Must Be Under 125 Pounds To Join

NEW DELHI India (AP) — Fourteen skinny little members of Parliament have organized themselves into a mutual protection society under the slogan "We demand security from the masses."

Qualification for membership was determined with the assistance of a bathroom scale and boasts of 99 pounds in a dripping wet dhoti was elected president since he was the smallest of the charter members.

Jugannath Pahadia 119 pounds who presided until the president was elected turned the meeting over to Menon and said "Instead of two chairs we can share one." He then sat down on the same seat with his parliamentary colleague.

The new president decided his gaunt-looking constituents needed nourishment before they got down to the difficult task of adopting a program so he ordered cups of ice cream followed by a heaping pile of papar, a pancake-sized spicy wafer which is an Indian favorite.

Meanwhile Dr. B.K. Mazundar the Parliament physician dispensed vitamins to the membership.

Then President Menon his energy restored said "I would like to lay down the broad lines of our program."

"First we demand that we be charged half price in each and every restaurant since we take less to eat."

"Second charges for bus train and airplane fare should be on the basis of weight" Menon added.

One member suggested "The fat ones should not shake hands with us lest our fingers give way."

Returning to the matter of transportation one member said "There should be no fat ones allowed in an upper berth above us."

Menon suggested "The blood bank must be ready for our needs. And the fat ones should donate more blood."

"We need subsidized milk butter and eggs" offered one member. The doctor interrupted to point out "You need more fatty diet and starch."

A member said "I propose the doctor meet with us periodically and lecture us on how to put on weight."

Menon told the group "When I was heavy I was sick often. But I've never been sick since I took off weight."

Asked how much he weighed as a "fat" man Menon replied "About 125 pounds. But then I went on some long hunger strikes—protests against British rule—and lost all my fat."

At this point the members decided to send for Piloo Mody who five days earlier had been elected president of a fat man's club of Parliament.

The thin man's club was born in fact in a spirit of good-natured retaliation against the fat man's club which will admit only persons weighing at least 200 pounds.

Mody who weighs 250 pounds strolled in looked at the comparatively skimpy meal of ice cream and paper and sniffed "There is as much difference in our weights as there is in the fare over here."

Sitting down to polish off a cup of ice cream Mody took a look at the club resolutions stooipng at the demand for transportation fare based on weight.

"That's not a very fair resolution" he scowled. "As president of Bhim I would have to lodge a protest."

The fat mans group named their club Bhim after a mythological Hindu figure who was noted for his weight and strength. The lean man's club on the other hand has chosen the name Sudhama after a trim epic hero in Hindu mythology.

Study Church Property Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government shortly will ask Congress to curb the tax exemptions that permit churches and charities to buy up going firms to be operated in competition with taxpaying businesses.

The wave of church purchases of unrelated businesses—such as the acquisition of the Real Form Girdle Co., Brooklyn, by the Cathedral of Tomorrow of Akron, Ohio—has raised alarms at the U.S. Treasury and among small business organizations.

Simultaneously, some cities and states are moving cautiously to restrict real estate tax exemptions on religious property which, across the country, is valued at an estimated $79.5 billion.

One authority has estimated that state and local governments are foregoing $1.6 billion in revenue annually under the property tax exemption—or $32 a year for every taxpaying family.

There are stirrrings of sentiment among some religious groups in favor of voluntary tax contributions by churches, probably at lower rates than the regular levy. A few churches even have begun making such payments and the topic is alive in the religious press.

But that's a matter, most people agree, for long-term solutions. By contrast, the Treasury wants enactment this session of its proposed crackdown on the tax-exempt business investments of churches, charities and foundations.

How much revenue would this produce? The Treasury says it doesn't know. No one else owes either, because churches and religious orders are not required to report their income.

A similar tax-tightening proposal failed last year. The new one, said a Treasury spokesman, will be modified in some respects. It will go to Congress separately from, and in advance of, the general package of tax "reform" proposals promised by President Johnson. On the latter, action is not expected until 1968.

The immediate targets are arrangements that tax lawyers call bootstrap sales and leasebacks. They are devices by which tax-favored groups can trade on, or capitalize, their exemptions.

Under the sale-and-leaseback arrangement, a church or charity buys a business, financing the purchase with a five-year mortgage. It then leases the plant back to the same operators.

It takes most of the earnings by installments, out of the rent collections. Thus the term "bootstrap"; the business in effect buys itself.

The Supreme Court put more frosting on the cake in 1965. In the case of one Clay B. Brown, who sold out his lumber mill to an institute for cancer research, the court held that Brown could treat the profits from the sale as capital gains, taxable at far below the income tax rate.

So everyone wins except Uncle Sam—Uncle Sam being all the other taxpayers, whose burden is increased.

To the charity or church, income from interest, dividends or royalties are in the tax-exempt category along with rentals received.

The church thus realizes greater earnings than a taxpaying operator could. It therefore can offer a higher price for a business. It takes no risk and needs litttle if any cash investment. There are numerous variations, but the bootstrap sale usually pays out in five years or less.

In the Brown case, the high court's majority said the remedy, if one is needed, is up to Congress.

The three judges who dissented, holding that the transaction was not a genuine sale, nevertheless agreed that congressional action is needed.

Otherwise, said their minority opinion: "The tax avoidance routes opened by the court's opinion will surely result in large-scale ownership of private businesses by tax-exempt organizations."

There's been a rush to make that predidtion come true. Charities, churches and foundations have retained brokers to find businesses that will sell out. The Treasury has collected a display of advertisements from business papers—offers by institutions to buy going businesses.

Stanley S. Surrey, assistant secretary of the Treasury says the Treasury is "alarmed by this exploitation of the tax exemption privilege" and expresses hope for early congressional action to nip bootstrap sales.

The Treasury's plan is nearly ready. It would tax the income which charities, churches and other exempt organizations receive from property bought or improved with borrowed money, if the income is not related to the purpose on which the tax exemption was based.

The bill would not affect investments made out of a charity's own funds. Nor would it church's borrowing to build a parish hall.

Neither would the bill alter the situation which was the hub of the Clay B. Brown case—the grant of capital gains treatment to the seller. The Treasury feels this would take care of itself, if the bootstrap loophole were closed.

Other tax privileges could help churches amass formidable ecenomic power, authorities have pointed out. For instance, the accumulation of investment wealth is not interrupted by inheritance taxes, for churches do not die. And real estate taxes are not payable on property used for church purposes; in many places, such purposes are liberally defined.

A warning that churches might be able to control the whole economy of the nation within the predictable future was sounded this spring by Episcopal Bishop James A. Pike. Writing in Playboy magazine, he proposed a formula for progressively steeper taxation of church property. Unless such steps are taken, he suggested, the church could again become "the target of revolutionary expropriation" by governments—as in ages past.

A Roman Catholic priest, the Rev. Richard Grider wrote in a widely quoted Wall Street Journal article: "The Catholic church must be the biggest corporation in the United States. Our assets and real estate holdings must exceed those of Standard Oil, AT&T and U.S. Steel combined."

The Baptist Foundation of Texas—according to reports cited by Bishop Pike—increased its assets from $20 million to $53 million in 10 years by encouraging its tax-exempt capital to multiply.

Protestant, Orthodox, Mormon and Jewish church groups, like Catholics, can be found as owners of hotels, textile mills, factories, department stores and so on—down to car washes and second hand stores. In Chicago, one church group undertook to operate a garbage dump.

"How Firm a Foundation"' was the headline used by the monthly Protestant magazine "Church and State" in reporting the 1965 purchase of Brooklyn's Real Form Girdle Co. by the nondenominational Cathedral of Tomorrow in Akron.

The Cathedral also owns Shopper's Fair, a discount house near the church, and has bought the Unity Electronics Co., Elizabeth, N.J.

"If the Catholics, the Baptists, the Episcopalians weren't doing it, we wouldn't do it," said the Cathedral's Rev. Rex Humbard, as quoted in "Church and State." And the president of Unity Electronics agreed that the Cathedral had merely outbid a Catholic church in acquiring his company.

And cities are becoming tougher. Harrisburg, Pa., has begun taxing church parking lots. Anchorage, Alaska, has added $20,000 a year to revenues by tightening the taxation of church property not used for religious or charitable purposes. A Lutheran home for the aged in Ohio lost a court case on its tax exempt status.

Whatever the decision of this Congress on the "unrelated income" of churches, most authorities agree that the question of payment of some property tax by churches is a matter unlikely to be settled in this decade or even this generation.

Yet some churches actually are volunteering contributions. The magazine "Christianity Today" reported that the town treasury of Montclair, N.J., received $1,000 from a Unitarian church for municipal services rendered. The American Jewish Congress has paid New York City $1,200 as a token tax on its Manhattan headquarters.

For the reasons why some smaller cities are hungrily eyeing tax-exempt real estate—and yet would be reluctant to touch it—a visit to Dubuque, Iowa, and its city manager, Gilbert Chavenelle, is instructive.

The city's property tax base is squeezed, Chavenelle says, by both tax exemptions and the deterioration of downtown real estate. And for three years in a row the city budget has been battered by Mississippi floods.

For 1968 there's a prospective gap of at least $275,000 between forseeable income and outgo, Chavenelle admits. Raise taxes? The rate already is crowding the legal limit. Borrow? There are both legal and practical ceilings on debt.

Would it help if the numerous church properties paid some tax? Obviously, says Chavenelle—but that's not the same as saying it should be taxed, he adds.

The city assessor finds there is about $1 of exempt property—schools, churches, governmental property and other—for every $3 of taxable property. The Metropolitan Planning Commission, using an area measure, finds that more than 40 per cent of Dubuque's 62,000 developed acres are in the public or semipublic category.

The exempt buildings include most of the city's finest, newest and largest structures. There are seminaries, colleges, academies, the motherhouses of several religious orders, assorted church homes, and more than 40 churches with related buildings.

Two-thirds of the children attend parochial schools. There are three church-affiliated colleges—the University of Dubuque, which is Presbyterian and coeducational; Clarke College, Catholic, for women, and Loras College, Catholic, for men. There are also Wartburg Seminary, Lutheran; six Catholic convents, two major Catholic hospitals, the Catholic archdiocesan offices and the archbishop's manse. More church building is in progress.

But downtown, 128 old buildings are tabbed for razing in an urban renewal effort. The courthouse and city hall are dilapidated. Sitting in the latter, City Manager Chavenelle considered a reporter's questions.

"I don't know the answers," he acknowledged. "The exempt property requires city services, just like taxpaying property. On the other hand, because of the parochial schools, Dubuque enjoys the lowest school tax rate in the state.

"The college student population makes a great contribution to the city's economic stability and income—and thus to its financing.

"And there's something else. Dubuque is an industrial city, but if history remembers us it won't be for the tractors produced or the hogs slaughtered. It will be for our fine religious and educational centers. I don't think I'd trade them away."

The dilemma of Dubuque is repeated in thousands of towns and counties across the country.

Boy Scouts Hold First Honor Court

The first Court of Honor of the newly organized Boy Scout Troop 61, was held in June at the Trinity Lutheran Church, 32nd and Southwest Blvd., with the Scouts lighting 12 red candles as they gave the 12 parts of the Scout law and defined each.

Against a back drop containing a large Scout emblem topped with "On my honor" in red letter, tenderfoot badges were presented to the following: John Doughtery, Dale Anderson, Randy Benedict, Bobby Bruns, John Young, Bobby Hartley, Mark Mosier, Roger Fingland, Dudley Lehmer, Kim Livingston, Warren Pahlow, Danny Pahlow, Mark Dollard, Danny Embree and David Wells. The parents of each boy receiving a badge were presented and pinned the badge on their son's uniform.

A first aid demonstration on both the old and new method of artificial respiration by Eric Doering, Roger Fingland and Larry Young.

Second class badges were presented to Wesley Keele and Roger Fingland.

A demonstration on stretcher carry was presented by Dudley Lehmer and Kim Livingston with Charles Doughtery as the patient.

First class badge was presented to the parents of Eric Doering, who in turn pinned the badge on his son's uniform.

Labeled Detainees

Vietnamese Peasants Are Calm Despite Capture

LONG AN PROVINCE Vietnam (AP) — The barefoot Vietnamese peasants squatted in the clearing beside the delta hamlet calloused hands roped behind them and brown eyes blankly watching the American soldiers.

Pasteboard tags dangled from the 20 captives called "detainees" because no better word has been found for the human flotsam swept up by military patrols in a country where every man can be an enemy.

In a few minutes two helicopters would drop into this hamlet clearing and fly them to a South Vietnamese interrogation point 10 miles away.

Some might get thrown into a Vietnamese prison as real or suspected Communist guerrillas. A few draft-dodgers might get thrown in the army with equal abruptness. Most would be freed to return as best they could to their thatch-roofed dirt-floor homes—with time along the way to ponder the habits of the foreigners who took them captive.

As they squatted at the hamlet crossroads no one could even begin to sort them out. There was a wall of frustrated silence between the American soldiers and the bound captives. There was no interpreter with the U. S. company. The Vietnamese knew no English.

Most of the Vietnamese had identity papers of some sort but none of the Americans could read Vietnamese. Anyway as one GI snorted "Anybody can get a fake identity card around here."

The detainees had been rounded up in a daylong tiring sweep through the tropical palm stands and gooey rice paddies of Long An Province—an incredibly fertile area where 70 per cent of the people by official admission are under control of the Viet Cong.

To the American patrol it was virtually enemy territory and with reason. Two days earlier more than 30 Americans had been killed and 120 wounded fighting guerrillas whose wives and daughters now peered sullenly at the GI's from seemingly peaceful hamlets.

The Americans had been sent to find and fight these guerrillas.

GI's were mostly in their teens and early 20s, in Vietnam three or four months and, like most American soldiers, counting the days before going home.

The fighting war they were beginning to understand. The other war, the political war, the war for minds—that is hard to impress on a young infantryman soaking wet from floundering across flooded paddies or fording twisting streams with 50 pounds or more on his back.

There had been no mention of the other war when the acting battaloin commander, 38-year-old Maj. Glenn H. Penny of Stillwater, Okla., had briefed his officers.

"Okay, let's give 'em hell," he concluded.

"Gungho!" chorused the fatigue-clad commanders.

It was a prebattle ritual with the 3rd Battalion, 2nd Brigade, 9th Division—a proud and competent outfit which calls itself the Tiger Battalion.

Penny outlined a complicated battle plan to crisscross his companies through the hostile country where two hard core guerrilla battalions—perhaps, 1,000 combat veterans—had lived and fought for years. It was relatively new type of operation for the army in the delta, with the men disembarking from armored Navy landing craft and then striking out crosscountry with shallowdraft monitors following up small streams to offer fire support.

The men of Bravo Company disgorged early in the morning into a startled village, with ducks quacking, children soon crying and an old man smoking a pipe in the doorway of his weathered home.

There were no Viet Cong in sight. The young and able-bodied men of the villages had disappeared. But the platoons fanning out across the paddies soon began to find a scattered few and in a country torn by civil war all young and able-bodied men are suspect.

As the number of detainees grew, Capt. Benjamin Franklin Myatt, the company commander from Dickson, Tenn., had them fall in behind, single file, with a GI guard nervously bringing up the rear.

Along the big rivers, easily accessible to government boats and patrols, there was no sign of the Viet Cong, but within half a mile or so the Viet Cong imprint was unmistakeable.

A trench line was found dug into a small patch of palm trees, a perfect ambush site. Walking along a dike separating two paddies, the Americans found a series of concealed bunkers. An old graveyard had been cleverly surrounded with bunkers and trenches.

The villagers, whatever their sympathies, evidently had decided to remain on their rich fields rather than risk the uncertain fate of so many refugees in Vietnam.

Through perhaps 10 miles of such terrain, the Americans marched by nightfall.

By then, the detainees had finally been flown out.

The infantrymen, soaking wet and tired, with cold C rations to eat, were set out to ambush patrols for the night. They would sleep perhaps four hours, uneasy and wet.

Tomorrow they would set out again.

Farewell!

Perhaps a twinge of nostalgia may follow departure of the personnel of the Sedalia Democrat and Capital from the building which has been the newspapers' home for 56 years.

But the time of farewell is upon us as final details are attended to in production of this last issue — the Sunday edition — in the building at 108-110 West Fourth street.

Many of us recall our first experiences in 1911 when new quarters then were occupied, new quarters in a two story building that since has been expanded to the alley on the north as the newspapers grew and bought more modern equipment.

Recollections of the past occur to remind us of the many friendly and competent persons in management and among the staffs with whom we were associated as carrier boy, reporter and editor.

What a thrill it would be for those who are no longer with us to participate in moving and occupancy of the most modern newspaper building in Missouri — one which will be our complete home Monday and from which newspapers will be produced by an entirely different method — the offset process.

And what a thrill it is for us to be among those equally fine and competent persons today who join in this exodus from an old building to a new one.

A moment of sadness in the deserted building, yes, but this is overwhelmed by the joyful anticipation of the beginning of a new era in the annals of the Sedalia and Central Missouri newspaper publishing business at Seventh street and Massachusetts avenue.

After we are settled in our new business home the management and personnel will want you all to come see us. But wait awhile until we get some of the remaining kinks ironed out.

So, in departure now from the old building. let us once more wave farewell; thence, turning south, give Hail to our new home.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

DREW PEARSON
and JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — With a year to go before the Presidential conventions, the Republican contenders are battling fiercely for the nomination that earlier they thought would be worthless. Now the political pros agree that President Johnson can be beaten in 1968.

Nixon's secret strategy, say insiders, is to line up delegates quietly at the local level, and to act the statesman who stands above petty political squabbling, saying nothing against his rivals that would prevent them from supporting him wholeheartedly if he should become the nominee.

Nixon is trying to keep behind the scenes, and to that end has spent considerable time 'studying" abroad.

Meanwhile Romney is caught in the merciless glare of the spotlight; is subject to the constant critical, clinical inspection of the press. Other presidential hopefuls also tend to gang up on the front runner, who judging from the publicity appears to be Romney but who in the smoke-filled rooms in really Nixon.

Nixon Leads Now

Insiders agree that if the convention were to be held now Nixon would win the nomination. He has enough delegate pledges in his pocket to assure victory. But the former vice president acknowledges privately that his ultimate success will depend upon LBJ's popularity. If the President's rating with the public is low, the Republicans will take a chance on Nixon. But if the President's popularity goes up, the Republicans may look around for a candidate with more ballot-box appeal.

To prove he can win, Nixon is counting upon his unique popularity in New Hampshire to score a stunning victory in the nation's first presidential primary. The confidential polls show that in New Hampshire he has a surprising 2-to-1 edge over Romney.

Nebraska's Gov. Norbert Tiemann has claimed that Nixon will also win the Nebraska primary. But the confidential polls show that Romney is the clear favorite with midwestern voters.

Romney's prospects are based upon the backing of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, whose formidable organization is working for the Michigan Governor. Rockefeller has warned his fellow moderttes that they will lose the nomination by default unless they unite behind Romney.

Other hopefuls, however, are reluctant to give up their bargaining power by offering premature pledges to Romney — as long as they are in a position to make a deal for the Vice Presidential nomination or perhaps even get a shot at the top spot.

Rocky In The Wings

The Washington Press corps has also become critical of Romney. His Mormon piety isn't popular with them. Despite his background as a Senate aide and Auto-Industry representative in Washington, plus his successful record as President of American Motors and Governor of Michigan, they refuse to believe he has any depth.

"We're going to get Romney," Hearst's Marianne Means has told high administration officials.

Romney's strategy will be to prove his popularity with the voters by rolling up primary victories. This was the strategy that won the Democractic nomination for John F. Kennedy in 1960. Nixon, in turn, has adopted the strategy that won the Republican nomination for Barry Goldwater in 1964.

Both Reagan and Percy, while disclaiming any presidential ambitions in 1968, have sent political scouts across the country to line up second-choice commitments from the delegates— in case the two top contenders falter.

If this should happen, Rockefeller would fall heir to most of Romney's delegates and would emerge as the strongest contender on the second ballot. He would also be the toughest Republican for the Democrats to beat.

Orval Faubus Library

Stokely Carmichael, Floyd McKissick and Dr. Martin Luther King, among others, will be delighted to receive in their mail an appeal from ex-Gov. Orval Faubus of Little Rock, Ark., school integration fame, asking for money to build the "Orval E. Faubus Library."

Prominent citizens all over the USA are receiving this Faubus appeal. It states that the library will house "documents showing the early Faubus family history and the Scottish-Anglo-Saxon-Ozark" background.

It will also house "more than 50 filing cabinets of documents and corrrespondence — letters from every post office in Arkansas. . . Awards as 'American Legion Man of the Year,' 'Municipal Man of the Year,' 'Conservationist of the Year' . . . list of all board, commission, and special committee members who served in the Faubus administration. . . Political literature, cards, posters and pictures used in various campaigns. . . State maps, 13 of them showing the election returns in each campaign. . ."

The ex-Governor made headlines around the world when he forced President Eisenhower to send troops to Little Rock to desegregate Central High School. He now states he is "planning to restore the one-room school on Greasy creek, north of Combs, where I received my first schooling. More than a thousand dollars have already been spent restoring the school."

Messrs. McKissick, Carmichael, and King have not yet indicated how much they wish to contribute.

Ceremony Is Held For Sir Chichester

LONDON (AP) — Britain recalled the glory and courage of its past in ceremonies Friday honoring Sir Francis Chichester, the Briton who sailed alone around the world.

Queen Elizabeth II formally dubbed the 65-year-old mariner a knight, then 250,000 Britons cheered him as he rode through London's financial district perched on the back of a white convertible.

"You personify all that is best in Britain—the spirit of initiative, adventure and determination," London's lord mayor, Sir Robert Bellinger, told Chichester. "Your voyage has shown the world that Britons still have something which everyone needs—courage and resolution in the fade of seemingly insurmountable odds."

"This welcome is not mostly for me but for a kind of symbol," Chichester replied. "My voyage represents an independent effort, a private enterprise that appeals to the British man."

Sir Francis said it was only "by the greatest luck and by the grace of God" that he was able to complete last May 28 the 28,-500-mile sail in his 53-foot ketch Gipsy Moth IV.

Chichester's day began with a short sail up the Thames River to Greenwich, where Queen Elizabeth II and her husband, Prince Philip, waited. Hundreds of boats sounded horns and dock cranes dipped in tribute.

As 2,000 persons watched in the sunny quadrangel of the Royal Naval College, Chichester placed a knee on a crimson cushioned knighting stool. Smiling, the queen tapped him on each shoulder with the sword her ancestor, the first Queen Elizabeth, had used to knight Britain's 16th century circumnavigator, Sir Francis Drake, a few miles up the Thames at Deptford.

Millions saw on television the brief ritual that was the formality of Chichester's knighthood announced by the queen last Jan. 28 before he left Sydney, Australia, on his homeward trip.

Wearing a blue blazer and sailing cap, Sir Francis escorted Elizabeth and Philip on a tour of his yacht. Then he set off upriver for an official reception in London.

My Collection

I am not a collector of anything,
Or so I tell myself,
And then I look at the empty jars
And bottles on the shelf,
The jars of cold cream and astringents
The talcum I never use,
The belts to the dresses long since gone
And the worn out, out-of-style shoes;
I look at the pans in the cabinet
That I never need when I cook,
The letters so long ago answered
There is junk everywhere that I look,
The mateless gloves and earrings,
The stack of old hose with runs,
The empty lipstick containers,
And unstrung beads by the tons,
The pens of a wide assortment,
None of which now will write
And among the empty boxes
The bulbs that no longer light;
Ah, no, I'm not a collector
Of anything that's worth while,
But I certainly am a collector
Of things useless and out-of-style,
Some people have priceless collections,
Catalogued or framed, dust free,
But the art of a good collector
Simply never was meant for me,
Mine I can't sell, trade or give away
Because it's not worth a dime,
It really belongs on the trash pile
But it seems that I never find time,
I look at my sorry collection—
I must get rid of, really I must,
But somehow I just keep on collecting

Kiesinger Trying To Solve German Economic Problems

BONN, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger is giving top priority to solving the financial and economic problems that have plagued West Germany since mid-1966. The fate of his government may depend on whether he succeeds.

Kiesinger canceled his talks with President Johnson in Washington this weekend to lead a government debate on financial and economic measures for the next four years, designed to balance budgets and to lift the country's economy.

Kiesinger evidently wanted to insure that the various groups that support his government do not whittle away at the proposals, which are bound to contain some unpopular measures.

There is general agreement in the Cabinet that taxes must rise and government spending drop. The ministers do not see eye to eye on where the cuts must be made and what taxes must be hiked to raise the estimated 34.5 billion marks—$8.85 billion—needed to balance budgets for the next four years.

The Social Democrats, who under Foreign Minister Willy Brandt make up the coalition government with Kiesinger's Christian Democrats, are pressing to keep most of the social security and pension payments intact.

The Christian Democrats are out to protect the small businessmen and industrialists who are the backbone of their party.

Differences in the Cabinet are not along party lines, however. Finance Minister Franz Josef Strauss, leader of the Christian Democrats' influential Bavarian wing, and Economics Minister Karl Schiller, a Social Democrat, seem to have found wide areas of agreement.

On the other hand, Defense Minister Gerhard Schroeder and Labor Minister Hans Katzer, both Christian Democrats, are understood to have threatened to resign if their budgets are cut heavily. The defense and labor budgets are the largest items in the $18.5-billion budget for 1967 and they are unlikely to survive intact next year.

Cuts are not expected to be as drastic as one proposal attributed to the Social Democrats which called for a 200,000-man reduction in the 460,000-man army. The proposal was published by the magazine Der Stern but Social Democratic spokesmen said it was only a study.

Leaders of both parties stress the major nature of the financial crisis, but point out that success depends on both parties, working together.

"The very existence of the German people is at stake. If we do not succeed in putting our finances in order, the result will be national chaos," Kiesinger said in a speech last weekend.

Brandt put it this way: "The grand coalition stands before a test. That is not the same things as a test of strength between the Social Democrats and the Christian Democrats."

Strauss was more optimistic, saying, "I have no reason to doubt the grand coalition will not withstand this test. After all, it was formed to resolve the big problems."

practically every player in the duplicate game made that bid. Invariably North would overcall with one spade and North and South would wind up at four spades. If hearts were opened and continued, North could make six but a club or diamond shift would almost surely hold North to five odd.

One West player decided to open with four hearts in spite of being vulnerable against nonvulnerable opponents. North passed. East passed and it was up to South.

South didn't have anything like a four spade bid but he was one of those players who are allergic to being shut out by an adverse preempt. He took a deep breath and came out with four spades.

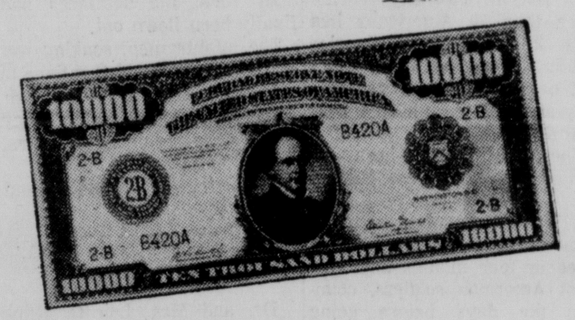
This excited North. He bid four no-trump to check for aces and South dutifully bid five diamonds to show one. North decided that his partner wouldn't have more than one heart and jumped to the spade slam.

West was on lead and naturally opened the king of hearts and continued the suit. He was looking at the North hand and couldn't be sure that South did hold at least one more heart.

South ruffed, low, played out his ace and queen of spades, finessed dummy's queen of clubs, ruffed dummy's last heart; returned to dummy with the ace of diamonds, drew East's last trump, came to his hand with the king of diamonds, took one more club finesse and claimed his slam.

MONEY CLIPS

by Mort Reed



Origin of the Dollar $ign

Unlike the symbol for the British pound sterling, the dollar sign is not an official designation of the U. S. Treasury. The dollar sign ($) appears on several U. S. revenue and fee stamps but only once has it been used on a piece of U. S. currency — the $10,000 bill.

The interlocked letters U.S. appear on many pieces of our paper money but the base of the letter U being intact removes the possibility of it being a dollar sign. Actually, the letters are intended to show the note or certificate was issued by the government of the United States.

Many opinions have been expressed as to the origin of the sign, such as, "It's a contraction of the letters U.S.," or "It's a stylized version of the banner around the Pillars of Hercules on the Spanish silver dollar," etc. None of these are correct. The sign was in use as early as the 16th century, according to Dr. Florian Cajori's "History of Mathematical Notations."

The Portuguese called the sign "cifrao" and used it as a designation for thousands. As an example, our figure 2,345 would be written 2$345 by using the Portuguese method. The Spaniards used the same sign for the same purpose and called it the "calderon."

Dr. Cajori's reasearch shows our dollar sign came from continually modifying the old Mexican sign Ps for "pesos."

In 1943 Sir Winston Churchill suggested a combined currency for the two great powers using the above symbol — the dollar sign superimposed over the sign for the pound sterling.

Cultural Revolution Has Gotten Out Of Control

LONDON (AP) — Like a runaway train Mao Tse-tung's cultural revolution is careening wildly out of control, dragging most of continental Chia into turmoil, violence and anarchy.

This is the firm coviction among representatives of important Communist and non-evoys in Pekig.

They say the authority of China's central govornent is crumbling and Peking's writ is recognized in only six of the coutry's 29 administrative units.

An ultimate Maoist triumph is possible, these authorities say, but they also foresee his possible defeat in a climax that could come this year with the relatively moderate premier, Chou En-lai, 68, emerging as caretaker-boss pending the rise of new and younger leaders.

A third outcome being suggested is the indefinite continuation of the present disorder that could yet thrust the Chinese people back into a sort of warlordism. Early this century regional leaders set up military dictatorships that waged senseless wars against neighbors and rivals. Some opened direct channels to the outside world for trade and arms buying.

Because they think a climax to this drama may come soon, countries like Britain and India maintain relations with Peking although their missions now sere no purpose other than to provide targets for mob attack against all the rules of international behavior.

The cultural revolution grew out of Mao's 1962 campaign to make the future young leaders of China "Red as well as expert." He regarded the Communist party's old guard as insufficintly revolutionary.

Mao set the Red Guards on thc rampage last August after failing to bend fellow-leaders of the Communist party to his will over economic policy and over his refusal to bury the hatchet with the Russians.

President Lih Shao-chi is seen by some as a powerless political has-been, branded as China's arch-revisionist. Yet Mao has been unable to rally a two-thirds vote of the party's Central Committee needed to oust Liu and dares not summon a new congress of the party which last assembled in 1958.

For all practical purposes, the party under its "corrupted, revisionist leadership" ceased to function in an operational sense after the Red Guards moved into action.

By last January it lookd as if the mass tactics of the Maoist irregulars were winning. A solid anti-Maoist leadership still held sway in certain provinces but the old warrior, believing he could still call on the army as a least trump, seemed ready for the kill. He called for a three-way alliance—of the army, the Maoist revolutionaries and the pro-Maoists in office—to supplant the old leaders throughout the land.

Then more trouble descended.

The disruptions of the winter began to be felt. Farmers, workers and students on Red Guard srvice could not carry out the spring sowing, run the factories, attend their schools. In the provinces old and tired rulers resisted the attempts of the new, Redder-than-Red intruders to take over power. Worse, Maoists began battling Maoists in local struggles for supremacy.

The People's Liberation Army, ordered to impose a Maoist peace, faced an impossible task sorting out "genuine revolutionaries" from the hundreds of self-styled Maoist groups. Beyond this, local commanders found it hard, or impossible, to turn on their old comrades in positions of power.

● For a short time before I turned pro in 1954, I was a salesman-manufacturer's representative with little thought of a pro golf career. But the lure of playing the game I have always loved proved too great. It's hard to say now whether I'd have gone back into the business world or into teaching golf or some other phase of the game if I'd failed.

● You are still Hollywood's glamour symbol. Do you see any of the old glamour in Hollywood today? —J. F., Austin, Tex.

● In terms of my definition of glamour, I feel that Hollywood is allowing some of this magic ingredient to fade from the screen—not because of the lack of glamorous people but because of the abundance of glamorless movies being made. I mean the sick, far-out, "realistic" ones with the emphasis on sex, horror, depravity, and violence. I've always felt movie-goers enjoyed vicarious excursions into a glamorous world through the movies they saw.

FOR REP. LESTER WOLFF, Congressman from New York

● I read that you planned to visit Red China. What was the outcome of the trip?—Richard Dresser, Inglewood, Calif.

● Last December I presented my passport and visa to the Red Chinese travel office of Hong Kong, requesting permission to visit Peking. The bureau advised me I might do better to visit Canton. I preferred Peking, however—and so was told I'd have to wait for confirmation. Later word was sent to me in Manila that the Red Chinese government had turned down my visa. There was no further explanation. Subsequently I've applied for permission to visit North Vietnam. To date, I've had no response. I'd make these trips at my own expense and travel as a private citizen.

WHAT IN THE WORLD!

Secret Societies Washington wives have formed into six secret societies called International Neighbor Clubs. Members refer to one another by their first names, and meetings are never reported in the press. Main reason for the anonymity: some of the member wives are from politically sensitive countries—and the wives don't want to cause their husbands political embarrassment.

Handicapped Students Have grades, will study—but where? That is the question for thousands of handicapped youths because many campuses aren't equipped with ramps, elevators, etc., to accommodate them. The University of Illinois in Champaign is an exception, as some 250 handicapped students learn each year. Memoir Lane Now that Svetlana Stalin's telling all to U.S. publishers, the Reds are cranking out some memoirs of their own. Until now, only Russian military men published their life stories—usually filled with accounts of key victories. But a high-ranking civilian, Anastas Mikoyan, will be the first Red to break Kremlin reticence. The initial part of his autobiography is due next year.

Our Baby Was Born While We

WHENEVER I LOOKED at my 100-foot brigantine Laila being battered between angry surf and jagged rocks, I'd feel that a good part of my life was disintegrating in sea and wind. Nothing, I thought, could be worse.

Then on Nov. 27, 1966, six days after our shipwreck on a deserted beach in the Caribbean, my wife Ytta told me, "Stephen, I'm having cramps. I think it's the baby."

We had always referred to our first-born as our "Christmas baby," but I could understand why it might be coming prematurely. After all, Ytta had been buffeted about when the Laila smashed into the rocks of Rum Cay; then she'd been carried ashore in wind-whipped seas; she'd helped salvage survival material; she'd suffered the anxieties of not knowing how long we would be stranded. And complicating Ytta's first delivery was a serious RH-blood factor.

A primitive village was 10 miles from us, but it had no medical facilities and only weekly direct contact with civilization through a mail boat—which we were to learn was out of service.

"Ytta," I said, "it's just nerves, not the baby." I didn't really believe that myself. I asked Jim Butler, one of my crewmen, to head for the village, a day's walk (and he was barefooted) through coral and thorny underbrush. We hoped a telegraph operator there could convince the Coast Guard it was safe to land an amphibian plane off our shore. Then Ken Mazzaferro, my other crewman, and I tried to reach passing ships with our radio.

But about 5 a.m., Nov 28, in our tent made of spars and square sails, Ytta called, "Stephen, the time has come." Outside, I could hear the groaning of timbers as the Laila slowly died, and with her my life's work. Rum Cay had taken that from me, but it would not take Ytta and our baby.

"Don't worry," I said. "We'll have the baby—and we'll name him Rum Cay!"

The story began two years ago when I was a lonely man with an ambition. After service as a legal officer in the U.S. Navy, I'd worked 10 years on charter boats in the West Indies and had scraped together enough money to buy my own vessel. I went to Scandinavia to find it—not knowing what I was looking for, just knowing that I'd recognize my boat when I saw her.

Months later in western Denmark I found the Laila and fell in love with her—an outdated coastal wheat carrier, bulky oak and beech but not without grace. She would need complete renovation to accommodate 16 paying guests, but if you love boats, you love working on them.

I started sailing her home by way of Amsterdam—and fell in love again. Amsterdam was where I met Ytta, herself of Danish extraction, lovely, happy, the rare kind of woman who could sail with you in all kinds of weather—literally as well as figuratively.

Together, we sailed to England to replace a missing spar, then put in at ports in Spain, Portugal, and North Africa. In short, we had an adventurous honeymoon before setting sail for America with an itinerant crew.

Awaiting us was almost another year's work to make the Laila a comfortable charter brigantine. We scraped decks in Nassau, had cabins and deckhouse redesigned in Miami, then with the help of numerous relatives in Wrightsville Beach, N.C., fitted each plank and sewed each seam with care.

We headed for the Caribbean in October to avoid beating into the trade winds and to be "home" when our baby was born. We should have taken out insurance for the Laila, but every cent we had was invested in the boat.

We couldn't have wished for fairer winds than those that drove us toward Nassau. We left Miami and turned in about 1:30 a.m. At 4, Ytta heard the whine of a pump and went on deck to check.

"Stephen!" I heard her cry. "Land dead ahead!"

I rushed to the deck and saw the glint of surf line and white beach. With square sails aloft, it was impossible to try to sail windward and gain an offing. "I'll try to start the engine," I shouted.

The engine was a complicated one-ton semidiesel which I alone knew how to start. I whispered to it, "For once, just once, don't be stubborn." But on my first try, the Laila rolled hard and threw the flywheel out of position. On the second try, the engine started—but in the wrong direction.

Suddenly the Laila pitched and all but tumbled me. There was the sickening crunch of keel on rock. I made a third frantic attempt, this one successful. But the Laila didn't respond. A high-pitched scream over the wind told me that our screw had lifted out of the water. We were helpless.

Wind and sea rose in fury, just as animals do at the scent of blood. I found Ytta, her face glistening in sea spray and moonlight, and told her what she already knew: "The Laila's done for. But she's sturdy, and we'll have time to get a lot of equipment off."

"We're alive," Ytta said. "That's what's most important."

As dawn heightened, the sea and wind picked up and pounded the Laila on her rocky bed. We took off bedding, food, the radio, and other essentials. After a few hours, though, the boat was lurching so violently we were thrown to the surf-washed decks. Carrying Ytta, we waded through the foaming water to the safety of the beach, too exhausted to be bitter about the past or fearful of the future.

Our charts told us we were on Rum Cay, a dot in the Bahamas 180 miles from Nassau, and that there was a village nearby. Ken and Jim tried to walk there the first day, but the terrain was too difficult for exhausted men.

So life began on Rum Cay, and not too arduously, either. We had an 18-foot skiff and even electric lights from the boat's generator. We suffered only from mosquitoes and a scarcity of water. On the second day, Jim and Ken got to the village and returned with coconuts and water.

But they brought no encouraging news. The village had no large boat to take us to Nassau and no immediate prospects of any boats putting in. The waters off our beach were still too turbulent for planes to land. So for the next few days we salvaged what we could from the Laila, tides permitting, and considered trying to build a smaller boat from her wreckage.

Then Rum Cay Smith started to make his debut into life.

With Jim trying to get help in the village, Ken boiled his penknife in our last water and stood by with sail thread. Ytta lay on the beach as the Caribbean dawn began to highlight the still angry surf. I wondered why I had brought Ytta to this, but her optimism never faltered, and she reassured me throughout her labor.

Then, with relatively little trouble, Ytta gave us our son. Ken held a flashlight while I cut the umbilical cord with the penknife and tied it with sail thread. I washed our boy and gave him to Ytta. As I knelt beside them, there seemed nothing we needed to say. I wonder if any couple have ever been as close as we were those moments.

"I think we ought to celebrate," said Ken, maybe a little shaken. We'd rationed cigarettes, but now we lighted up without regard for tomorrow and toasted Ytta and our bellowing new arrival.

But fear kept nagging me. Ytta had not passed the afterbirth. And there was a good chance the baby would need blood transfusions because of the RH factor. I watched anxiously for Jim, but 24 hours passed and he hadn't returned. I sensed that even Ytta was becoming concerned, but still she joked:

" 'Rum Cay' Smith. If we had to be shipwrecked, why couldn't it have been on an island with a musical name like Eleuthera?"

That evening we heard shouts and from the dusk emerged Jim and a village native, Hugh Strong. We pounded each other on the back in happiness over Ytta's delivery, but I saw that Jim was worried.

"We tried everything to get help," he explained, "but there's only one chance. Take Ytta and the baby to the village, where a sea rescue plane will pick them up. They won't land in waters around here."

But how could we get Ytta and the baby to the village? It would take tortuous days overland. "We'll use the skiff," I finally decided. We all looked at the jagged reefs, foamy white under the leaping surf. "Tomorrow at dawn, God willing."

There was a good chance we would overturn or be swamped, so we placed the baby in an overnight bag which we could grab handily. Ytta began passing the afterbirth, but we laid out a bed in the skiff for her, and that night the sea showed us its first mercy, abating somewhat. At dawn, we shoved off.

As we headed for the reefs, I saw a giant breaker bearing down on us. We braced and rode it out—but it swamped our large motor, and we had to substitute a less powerful one. Once again, soaked and apprehensive, we launched the skiff, counting the waves and hoping to make our escape between their crests. Ken swam behind us, pushing the skiff. I steered, and Jim watched for menacing reefs.

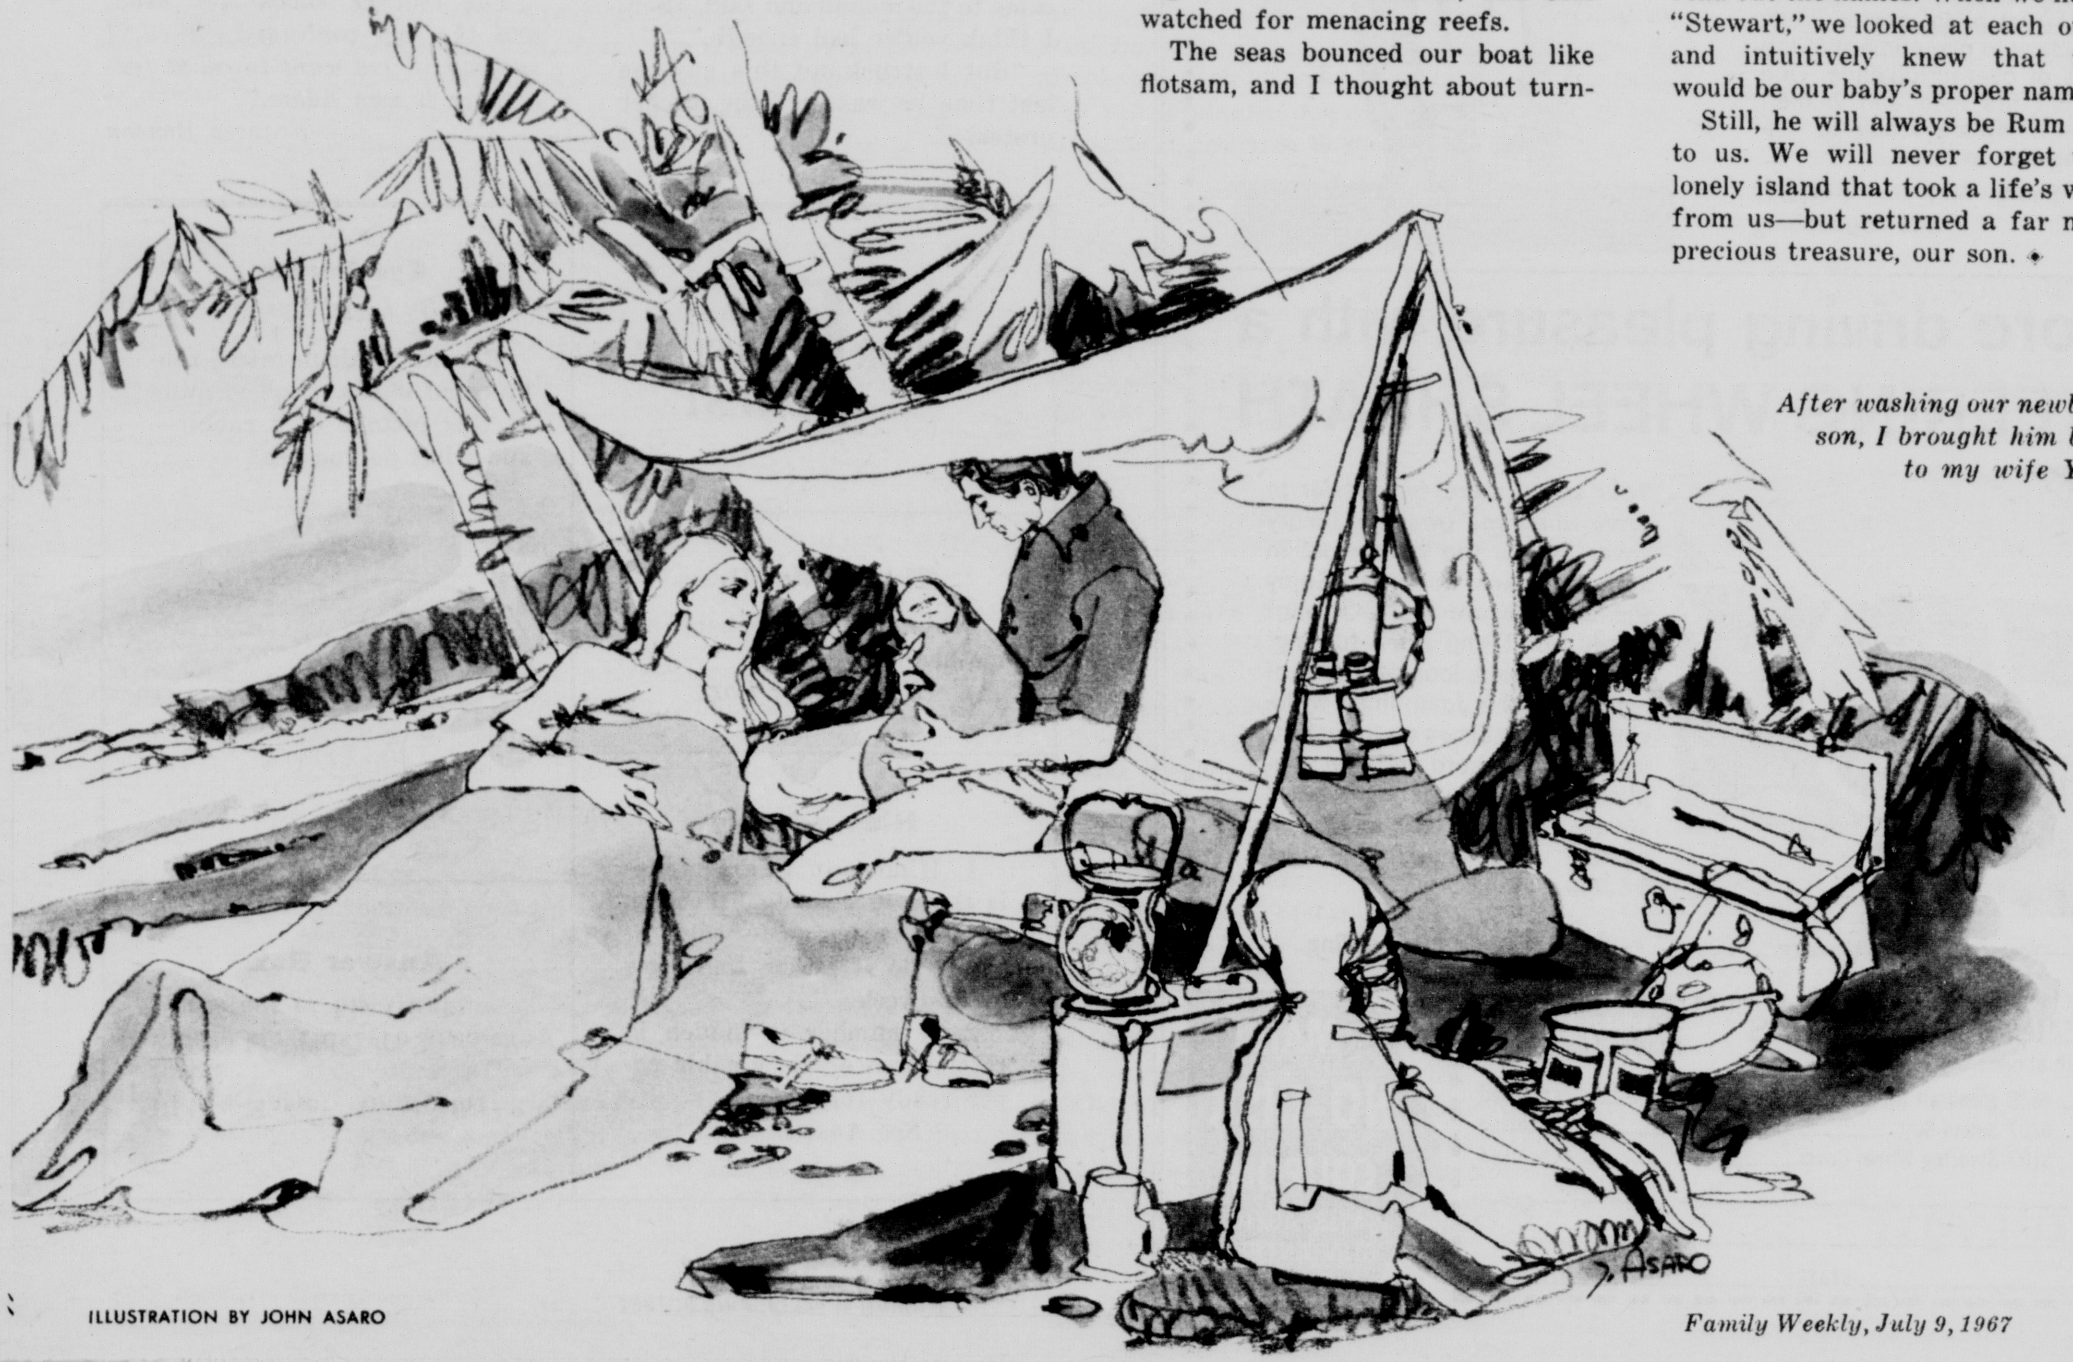
The seas bounced our boat like flotsam, and I thought about turning back and waiting for better weather. Then I saw a stretch of relatively calm water. It would be gone in a moment, though.

"Here we go!" I shouted, and drove the skiff through the calm, as Jim clambered aboard. In the brief instant the water was tranquil, we sailed into the safety of open sea. A moment afterward, we heard the sea thundering against the jagged rocks. In two hours we were approaching the village.

The natives passed Rum Cay from hand to hand, chuckling joyously over him as if he were their own, and indeed he was. The village midwife admired his strong lungs and approved our work. Soon the rescue plane landed and flew Ytta and our son to Nassau.

It took me three weeks to rejoin them. Ytta was fine, and so was Rum Cay, although he had needed a total blood transfusion. Ytta became serious. "It's time we found a proper name for him," she said, so we got out a dictionary and read out the names. When we heard "Stewart," we looked at each other and intuitively knew that that would be our baby's proper name.

Still, he will always be Rum Cay to us. We will never forget that lonely island that took a life's work from us—but returned a far more precious treasure, our son. ✦



After washing our newborn son, I brought him back to my wife Ytta.

"Why is the housewife so accident prone?"
Magazine query

Why am I accident prone, they ask?
Because my husband rejects the task
Of screwing a light bulb into the ceiling,
And so I must brave the ladder's reeling;
Because our dog sleeps sprawled on the floor,
Half in, half out the dining-room door,
To trip me up when I race for the phone.
Why, they ask, am I accident prone?
Because our kids are the sort who always
Leave trikes and skates in darkened hallways
In spite of direct parental suggestions;
Because I'm a housewife! Any more questions?

Summer Beauty Tips from 5 Make-Up Experts

By ROSALYN ABREVAYA

■ IN SUMMER, when exposure becomes the rule and healthy girl watching is practiced by the male contingent, attractive grooming is an imperative. How do the experts suggest you maintain your looks in the summer? Here's how:

Wayne Hutchinson of Clairol

"Hot-weather skin will often be overly moist or oily or both. Specially treated paper "squares," when pressed to the face, remove surface grime and absorb excess moisture and oil without disturbing make-up. The new transparent pressed powders in compacts are handy for touch-ups without building up color.

A word about sunlight. The heat of the sun can draw oil to the surface of the skin, which may darken make-up. Perspiration often has the same effect. To compensate, wear clear, bright shades of lipstick and blusher, or the frosted, silvery tones.

What should a woman look for in a sun-tan lotion? Today lotions come in formulations that take into consideration not only the texture of the skin but the degree to which a woman wishes to tan. Moisturizing agents are incorporated in many sun-tan products. Every woman should be able to acquire the depth of tan she wants without drying or flaking her skin."

Stan Lawrence of Revlon

"A wonderful way to contour your face in summer —to play up your bone structure or diminish an overly long nose or a jowled look—is to apply a frosted blusher, which contrasts brightly with a tanned skin. Apply the blusher, in either cream or powder form, to the tip of the nose to shorten it, on cheekbones to define them, or under the chin area to minimize it. Then watch your features take on added interest.

What to do about unsightly circles caused by sunglasses? Consider them a blessing in disguise. First, they indicate that you are protecting the area under your eyes, which along with the throat is most prone to dryness, and you are helping to keep the area lightened, free from shadows. A simple blending of a concealer cream and foundation will eliminate such rings. So if you fancy big sun shades, feel free to wear them."

William Loew of Charles of the Ritz

"Should a woman wear make-up even though she has a tan? Yes. Make-up in a shade to match your tan evens out the skin tone and gives it clarity of texture. It also protects your skin. When you have achieved the desired depth of tan, make-up will, to a degree, inhibit further tanning and drying.

My opinion of the new leg and body make-up? Not for everyone, but it is wonderful for the woman who must cover up skin defects—veins or any discoloration in her skin tone. Whether she wears stockings or not, leg make-up will enhance the beauty of her skin."

Hal King of Max Factor

"During the long, hot summer, baths treated with oil should be the rule. After the bath, don't rub the skin; blot it dry so all the oils remain intact.

To keep hair in fine condition, brush it to distribute the oils, use a conditioning shampoo, and dress the hair with a nonlacquer spray. Avoid excessive exposure to sun, wind, and water.

A woman over 25 should take particular care of her skin, since it becomes less dewy as it ages and is more susceptible to sunburn, sun blotches, and freckles. New "after-sun" moisturizers are excellent for the body after tanning. In summer, when make-up is bared to more sunlight, the true shades, hues, and tones are evident. If it is to be worn in daylight, make-up should be applied in a room where daylight is present; if it is to be worn under artificial lighting, the same lighting conditions should prevail."

Pablo of Elizabeth Arden

"If you want to keep make-up fresh on wilting days, here's a good tip: in the morning splash very cold water all over the face and apply an astringent. Several times during the day, blot the make-up with a tissue without removing too much of it, just the excess.

How to keep a tan going all summer? Practice applying a generous amount of moisturizer during the day and a night cream in the evening so that the skin is saturated with oils. When the suntan begins to go and the skin is in the process of peeling, avoid using any powder. This merely emphasizes the flaking. You might also use a "sun-tan" shade make-up, a warm-colored foundation that is usually darker than you normally use.

How to look more attractive on the beach? Be perfectly groomed with special emphasis given to the care of the legs, underarms, hair, eyes, and nails. To avoid chipping and split cuticles, use nail oil and cream frequently. Steer clear of enormously long false eyelashes that seem to be wearing you instead of the other way around."

Let your creativity be your guide in embellishing bread and buns to produce zestful snacks for informal get-togethers

Chicken Fiesta Buns

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
⅓ cup finely chopped green pepper
⅓ cup finely chopped celery
⅓ cup finely chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
½ cup tomato paste
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 tablespoon brown sugar
½ teaspoon chili powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon Accent
¼ teaspoon seasoned pepper
1½ cups chopped cooked chicken or turkey
¼ cup chopped pimiento-stuffed olives
8 split frankfurter buns, heated

1. Cook green pepper, celery, onion, and garlic in hot butter or margarine about 3 minutes.

2. Stir in a mixture of tomato paste and next seven ingredients, then chicken and olives. Simmer about 10 min. to blend flavors, stirring occasionally.

3. Spoon chicken mixture into buns; serve immediately with the Kidney Bean-Corn Relish (see recipe). 8 servings

Kidney Bean-Corn Relish

1⅓ cups corn, canned or cut from cooked corn-on-the-cob
1 can (about 1 lb.) kidney beans, rinsed and drained
½ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped onion
⅓ cup white wine vinegar
3 drops liquid hot pepper seasoning
3 tablespoons brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon seasoned pepper
½ teaspoon celery seed
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon dry mustard
⅛ teaspoon turmeric
2 tablespoons cold water

1. Mix corn and next ten ingredients in a saucepan. Heat, stirring occasionally, about 5 minutes.

2. Blend a mixture of flour, mustard, and turmeric with water. Bring relish to boiling and stir in the flour blend. Continue to cook, stirring constantly, until thickened, about 2 minutes. Cool.

3. Refrigerate several hours or overnight.

About 3 cups relish

Kidney Bean-Corn Relish adds south-of-the-border flair to Chicken Fiesta Buns and has special appeal to the teen-age crowd.

Loaf o' Franks on a Grill

8 frankfurters
½ cup shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
3 tablespoons finely chopped mushrooms
3 tablespoons finely chopped pitted green olives
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons catsup
2 cloves garlic, minced
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
1 loaf French bread
2 teaspoons sesame seed

1. Make a slit almost through each frankfurter. Fill each with a mixture of cheese and the next seven ingredients; set aside.

2. Cream butter or margarine and mustard together; set aside.

3. Use an apple corer to diagonally cut holes about 1½ in. in diameter and 1 in. apart into sides and through the loaf of bread.

4. Spread cavities with about a third of the mustard butter. Insert filled frankfurters, allowing ends to extend equally from each side. Spread about a quarter of the remaining mustard butter on the bottom of loaf and remainder on top. Top with sesame seed.

5. Wrap loaf in heavy-duty aluminum foil and seal tightly using drugstore fold. Place loaf to one side of grill over warm, not hot, coals. Grill 30 to 40 min., or until frankfurters are heated and bread is crisp; turn several times.

6. To serve, unwrap and slice loaf diagonally between frankfurters. 8 servings

"Yard Long" Sandwich Snack

1 loaf French bread
12 oz. cream cheese, softened
¼ cup prepared horseradish
2 tablespoons grated onion
½ teaspoon seasoned salt
¾ lb. canned luncheon meat or smokies, thinly sliced
1 cup finely chopped ripe olives
Sliced dill pickles
Cherry tomatoes, cut in halves

1. Split bread lengthwise and hollow each half by tearing out most of the soft center (may be used in other food preparation); set aside.

2. Mix cream cheese, horseradish, onion, and salt; spread on interior surfaces of bread.

3. Brown sliced luncheon meat or smokies in butter or margarine. Arrange on bread. Sprinkle with chopped olives. Tuck in pickle slices and tomato halves sprinkled with seasoned pepper and crushed basil or dill weed.

4. Place on an ungreased baking sheet and set in a 400°F. oven 10 minutes. Slice crosswise into large sandwiches. Garnish with sweet onion rings and parsley sprigs. 6 to 8 servings

Dog Nearly Goes Crazy from Itching

"Our dog is just a mongrel but I love her. Recently she has nearly gone crazy with an itch . . . biting out her fur, rolling and crying. We tried all kinds of treatments but nothing seemed to work. Then I bought Sulfodene. The relief was remarkable and now I wish you could see her. Her sore red back has healed. Her hair is coming in strong. I wish I could shout my praises to all dog lovers", says Mrs. Elsie Perkins, Round Lake, Ill.

SULFODENE is a scientific liquid medication developed by famous veterinary scientist, Dr. A. C. Merrick. SULFODENE works fast to clear fungus infection, stop fungus itch and heal itch-sores (often called mange, eczema, hot spots). So soothing, the most frenzied itching is relieved almost instantly. Biting and scratching is stopped. Quickly promotes healing. Open sores heal over. Scales disappear and hair grows back. Used by kennels and leading veterinarians. For dogs and cats. Get SULFODENE today! At all drug stores and leading pet shops.

The Way I See the

■ How do you see the 1967 All-Star Game—as a hitters' game or a pitchers' game?

In most cases, the pitcher has the advantage in an All-Star game, and 1967 shouldn't be an exception. The pitcher's advantage is in knowing that he has to go only three innings; he doesn't have to worry about pacing himself or tiring. He can give his all on every pitch. Besides, the batters aren't as familiar with his moves as they are with pitchers they face regularly in their own league.

■ The game will be played in the new Anaheim Stadium, home of the California Angels. Does this park favor pitchers or hitters? Does it have any fields which are difficult to play?

If the All-Star pitcher has his stuff, this park won't favor either pitcher or batter significantly for one game. It's symmetrical and 333 feet down each foul line, so don't look for any cheap home runs. On the other hand, the batters will be helped by facing dark backgrounds behind the pitcher. I think most outfielders would like to play this park. It has no confusing late-evening shadows as does Yankee Stadium – important since this will be played in the twilight – nor any built-in wind tunnels such as in Candlestick Park, San Francisco.

■ From what you've seen this season, which league seems to have the greatest over-all strength?

For the past 10 or 12 years I've answered that unhesitatingly – the National League. Now I'm not so sure. The American League has developed some fine players recently and has narrowed the gap, if not closed it.

■ So far this year, which rookies seem most impressive?

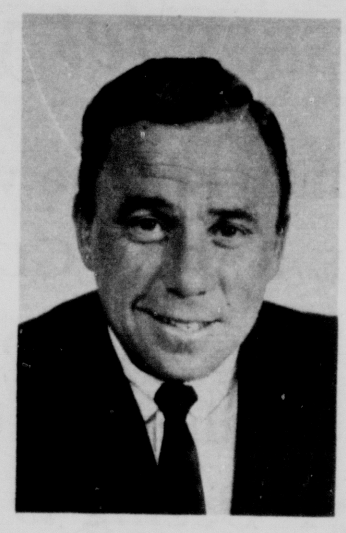
At this writing, Rod Carew, a 21-year-old Minnesota infielder, leads his team in hitting, fields almost flawlessly, and is fast on bases—though a little impetuous. Strikeout whiz Gary Nolan of Cincinnati is 19 years old, has a fast ball plus something unusual for hard-throwing kids – control. Boston's second baseman, Mike Andrews, hits well and with men on base. They're potential All-Stars in my book.

■ Do you think the present method of selecting players is the best?

Yes, I think it's great. In the past, voting by fans could be manipulated to select a home-town favorite rather than the true

The big play of 1966 All-Star game—Tim McCarver of the Cardinals slides to score the winning run in the 10th inning as National League edges the American 2-1 in St. Louis.

1967 All-Star Game



By PEE WEE REESE
Eight times All-Star infielder for the Brooklyn Dodgers; now NBC sports commentator

The former All-Star great and now tv sportscaster for the dream game fields the most-asked questions about the Tuesday spectacle at Anaheim

All-Star. Now, with players themselves voting, we get a more accurate, unprejudiced vote. Sure, there are always some disappointed fans, but it's a fair method.

■ This year, as in past years, there are relatively few All-Stars who bat .300 constantly. Yet we see more and more 20-game winners among pitchers–and more one-hit games. Why?

This is the "era of the pitcher" all right. There are several reasons. First, the coaching of pitchers is more intensive and better developed than for hitters. Second, records show batters hit better in day games – but the leagues are scheduling more and more night games. Third, teams have good relief pitchers; if the starter tires after seven innings, two or three hard-throwing firemen are ready in the bull pen. And, of course, the new parks are larger.

■ Looking back, what in your experience was the single most thrilling play in an All-Star game?

In 1950 at Comiskey Park, Chicago, Ralph Kiner homered in the ninth to tie the score 3-3 for the National League. Then in the 14th inning, Red Schoendienst blasted another homer that won the game – the most thrilling I've seen so far.

■ What was your greatest thrill as an All-Star Player?

It wasn't a particular play. It was being named to the 1942 team when I was just 22 years old. I didn't get a hit in my first few games and was verging on tears. Then I finally connected for a hit and – say, I guess that was my All-Star thrill after all! I know I'll still remember it vividly next Tuesday when I'm announcing the All-Star game instead of playing it.

STOP FISHING "BLIND"!

See 2 feet to 12 feet BELOW the water surface with LUNETTE RADAR GLASSES! This fantastic French optical discovery reveals hidden fish, marine life, instantly! Improves catches automatically! Seeing is believing...try them for 30 days FREE!

Famous "FIELD AND STREAM" Magazine in the March, 1966 issue calls Lunette Radar Glasses "among the most unusual personal accessories on the market"... to "help you locate fish and underwater obstacles without blinking an eye." And they should know!

IN THE EARLY mists of the grey dawn, French fishermen on the Cher River near Chenonceaux observed a strange sight: two men wearing dark glasses sat peering intently into the water. After a few moments, they would haul the tiny anchor of their outboard runabout and move. From this new spot they would gaze again into the water through their dark glasses. Once more, they moved on. Finally, after another move, they stopped. Smiles creased their faces. One of the men had hooked a gleaming pike.

Why the frequent shifts? Why the dark glasses? Why didn't these sportsmen remain in one spot and wait patiently for something to strike, as fishermen have always done? And why, suddenly, did they finally hook the big ones?

Why, indeed! These two were the very first Frenchmen to be wearing LUNETTE RADAR GLASSES. They could actually see below the water...where the fish were.

Now, this amazing optical discovery is available in limited supply in the U.S.A.

That knowledge is power! The power to penetrate 2 to 12 feet or more right through the surface to the bottom of swift-running streams, deep into lakes... ponds... ocean holes... down into brush piles... weeds.

The power to view schools of fish invisible to the naked eye before you even drop your line.

The power to see clearly way down deep—as you've never been able to do before—so you can expertly manipulate your line and lure at the sight of that all-important first moment—when the fish is ready to strike.

The power to take thrilling strike after strike without wasting a moment's pleasure by just following the time-tested rule every smart fisherman knows by heart: FISH WHERE THE FISH ARE!

Fish can run—but they can't hide. Not from you!

Try seeing down below the surface without these patented "fish finders". Impossible. No matter how hard you stare or shield your eyes, the mirrorlike reflection of clouds, sun, or sky stops you cold. LUNETTE RADAR GLASSES are polarized to eliminate glare. Scientifically designed hooded lens concentrates glare-less polarized light where it really pays off: Even 10 to 12 feet below the water where the fish are! With radar vision like this, you pierce the surface...look deep into the water not on it...pinpoint exactly where fish may be lurking...or move on to where they are...hungry and waiting for your bait!

LIGHTWEIGHT...PORTABLE...
Leaves both hands free!

You don't have to lug cumbersome equipment or intricate gadgets. LUNETTE RADAR GLASSES tuck into your pocket, ready to slip on anytime. So you can actually "X-Ray" any water surface and see what's going on below. Your hands are completely free as you spot fish...study marine life...search for sunken treasure!

Amazing No-Risk 30-Day Free Trial Offer!

A limited supply of LUNETTE RADAR GLASSES has just arrived here from France. No telling how long they'll last when word gets around to alert fishermen. So this may be your one and only chance to order under our 30-day money-back guarantee!

They're only $7.95 a pair and come with ear-pieces, as shown, or clip-on to fit over regular glasses. Send the coupon and LUNETTE RADAR GLASSES will be rushed to you at our risk. Use them to "fish where the fish are"... to get in more fishing in less time... to make your next trip out the catchingest one ever! Unless delighted, simply return glasses for full refund... no cost!

Open Your Eyes to Greater Fishing! Act Today!

All orders will be shipped as received until supply is gone. This announcement may not appear in this publication again. Avoid disappointment. Don't miss out. Rush coupon now!

VIEW WITHOUT LUNETTE RADAR GLASSES
This is how ordinary water looks through the camera lens alone. You see only the SURFACE. Are there—or aren't there—fish below? Put on Lunette Radar Glasses and see for yourself.

SAME VIEW WITH LUNETTE RADAR GLASSES

Florida's Miraculous One-Man Castle

Photos and Text by KURT SEVERIN

As a young man, Ed was engaged to a pretty girl who jilted him. In 1919, still haunted by memories of the girl he could never call anything but "Sweet Sixteen," he began to build his unique memorial to her. He kept at it for 30 years.

Utilizing nearby quarries of coral rock, Ed constructed special machines to cut and move stones bigger than those used in the Egyptian pyramids. Everything at Coral Castle is of solid rock—the wall, the two-story tower house, the decorative obelisk. There are stone tables, benches, chairs, a bed, a cradle, and even a bathtub of coral. Ed, who weighed less than 100 pounds, did all the work himself, miraculously moving stones that weighed as much as 29 tons.

Ed died in 1951. Vandals tried to dismantle Coral Castle, but the doors and rocking chairs, which yield to the gentlest pressure, withstood all attempts to remove them. Ed had built his castle to last for the ages. ◆

The brilliant new ELECTRA-CHARGE INSECT-DESTROYER utilizing both black and green light represents the latest scientific advance in insect destruction. Tested and reported by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, and Purdue University Agricultural Extention Service. They found that of the many flying insects that are attracted by light, most are attracted to BLACK LIGHT. HOWEVER, THE REMAINDER ARE ATTRACTED BY GREEN LIGHT. For this reason, the ELECTRA-CHARGE INSECT-DESTROYER offers this new, scientific, UNBEATABLE COMBINATION, which guarantees to destroy houseflies, mosquitoes, gnats, sandflies and all other harmful, destructive, disease-carrying, flying pests.

The all new ELECTRA-CHARGE INSECT-DESTROYER is the most powerful and ONLY one of its kind on the market today, actually clearing a 3 acre area of all harmful flying insects. Its ultra powerful BLACK AND GREEN beams draw insects like a magnet, destroying them before eggs are laid, at the height of the mating season. Insects actually seem to disappear as they enter the ELECTRA-CHARGE DESTROYER because they are instantly pulverized by the grid wires inside the unit.

The unit is absolutely safe, includes 6 ft. of weatherproof, outdoor cord, U.L. approved. It is as decorative as a designer lamp and includes a beautiful gold-colored hanging chain.

I was just thinking...

The Leopard's Spots

JOHN AND Margaret Leopard and the children moved as far into the North Woods as they could get. They built a small house pretty much like the pioneer cabins duplicated in city museums.

The Leopards looked like pioneers. John had a heavy beard and a shaggy head of hair Margaret trimmed for him every three weeks with her precious pair of scissors. They lived on game and fish and what they could preserve for the winter from the garden. The kids walked to school in a clearing, and most of the other students were the children of trappers and Indians.

Tourists who passed John on one of his infrequent trips to the village never dreamed he had been a big-city executive. He was, though, until he and Margaret reached the breaking point.

John had driven into the city from the suburbs. His ulcer was kicking up again and his desk was piled high with problems. Meantime, Margaret had spent the morning chauffeuring the children, fighting her way around a crowded supermarket, arriving at a committee meeting 30 minutes late and finding when she reached home that she'd left the coffee on and burned out the pot.

John was stuck in a packed elevator between the 35th and 36th floors for almost an hour that evening. When he finally got on the freeway, an accident tied up traffic for five miles. Then the electrical storm came. John sat in his car and watched the lightning. It cut off the electricity at his home. Margaret couldn't start dinner; she sat in the dark and cried.

That was the night the Leopards made up their minds to move to the woods and live the good life. And there John's ulcer healed, although he did develop a nagging backache from the unaccustomed physical labor. Margaret lost 15 pounds without dieting, but there was no one to notice her new figure. The children were brown as berries but lonely sometimes.

One evening they began remembering the old days. They laughed as they talked about how glad they were to be away from the pressures of civilization. And then for a long time they sat silently looking into the fire.

A week later when an old friend tried to look them up at their cabin, a trapper hailed him. "You're too late," he said. "Them folks moved back to the place they was trying to get away from. Must be crazier 'n loons."

Almost all of the time . . . Patty Johnson

POLLY'S POINTERS

DEAR POLLY—When my lipstick gets too low to apply from the tube I use the clean eraser end of a pencil and it goes on beautifully. When my knives get dull I stand an ordinary smooth house brick on end, give the knives a few strokes up and down the brick and they cut almost like new.—MYRTLE

DEAR POLLY—I use a toy rolling pin for rolling cracker crumbs and so on. This saves having to take the large one out of the pastry cloth.—MAY

DEAR POLLY—When your freezer and washer are in the same room remove the agitator from the washer and fill it with frozen food while you defrost the freezer. Close the lid and the food will stay frozen. A picnic chest can also be used. Put what is left over into a large grocery bag with another bag pulled down over the top.—MRS. R. D.

DEAR POLLY—I make my slightly worn bath towels into aprons and they serve for hand towels too. This also saves on ironing.—TIRED APRON IRONER

Polly pays a dollar for every idea used. Send them to her, care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY—Wrapping frozen food in several thicknesses of newspaper will keep it frozen while defrosting the refrigerator. You can even keep trays of ice this way. —TEP

DEAR POLLY—To keep from pouring out so much liquid wax that it splatters on walls and baseboard I put it in a clean empty plastic container that held dishwashing soap.—MRS. D. C.

DEAR POLLY—Both my washer and dryer are in the kitchen and since I am short on cupboard space I keep my washing powder in a plastic cookie jar on top of the washer. It looks neat and nice and is handy.—CONNIE

DEAR POLLY—My husband suggested that I use clip clothespins to hold my yarn in order when doing crewel embroidery. And he was so right. I number each pin with the number of the yarn as shown on the color chart or pattern I follow.—MRS. H. L. H.

DEAR POLLY—A few years ago I received a Lazy Susan for a gift. It has a wooden base and small dishes fit all around to hold tidbits for a party. I seldom entertain so I removed these dishes, put the base in the center of the table for sugar, cream, salt, pepper and condiments. With a large family this is very handy to turn without having to ask for every little thing to be passed.—MRS. M. L. V.

SIR, I HAVE HAZARDOUS BUSINESS IN SPAIN. I BEG YOU TO JOIN ME!

NO ONE EVER GOT OUT OF THIS WORLD ALIVE, BUT YOU ARE ONE OF THE RARE BREED WHO TRULY LIVES UNTIL THE INEVITABLE END, WITHOUT HEEDING THE DANGER!

YOU WILL JOIN ME?

UH--JUST A MOMENT --GULP!

WHERE DID HE GO? FAITH, DID I SAY SOMETHING WRONG? DID STRONG PRAISE FOR HIS DEEDS MAKE HIM UNEASY?

YOU SAY HE VANISHED? NOW WHY?

MORE TO THE POINT, WHY SHOULD YOU? WHAT DO YOU IN SPAIN? WHY CAN'T YOU REMAIN HERE?
